Dead girl, 16, had no license but 'drove every day,' friends say

By MARY BROWNFIELD and PAUL MILLER

MICHELLE CROKE, a 16-year-old Robert Louis Stevenson School student who would have been a junior this fall, died early Wednesday after crashing a friend's car at high speed into a tree on Ronda Road. The car was bent into a gruesome U by the sideways impact.

The girl had no driver's license, the CHP said. But she drove to summer school in the family car "nearly every day," according to a classmate.

Croke, whose family is from Lake Tahoe, was described as "happy all the time," with "nothing bad to say about anybody," by Sarah Jacobson, a fellow RLS student. "She didn't seem like the type to do anything reckless," said Kristi Clarkson, another RLS junior.

But both girls agreed that Croke frequently drove by herself from the family condo in Pebble Beach to summer school at RLS, where she was studying history.

"I think she said something about having a driving lesson this week," Clarkson said.

According to investigating California Highway Patrol Officer Darrel Mackinga's accident report, Croke was driving a 17-year-old San Mateo boy's Mustang at 50 mph when she was unable to make a curve on westbound Ronda just downhill from the Spruance Road intersection.

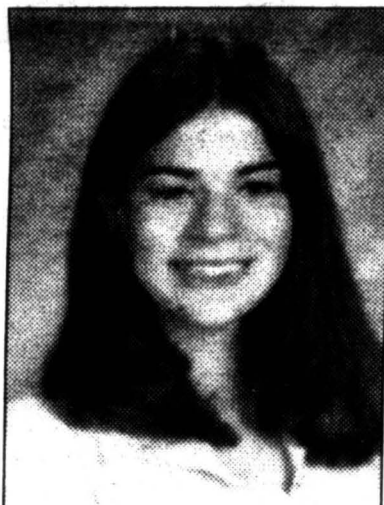

Croke's boyfriend, a 17-year-old who lives in Carmel, and the San Mateo boy were following in a blue Subaru on their way to the beach around 7 p.m., according to CHP Officer Richard Richards. They told Mackinga they saw Croke take the corner too wide and lose control of the car before she hit the tree.

Firefighters from two stations in Pebble Beach were on the scene within minutes. Croke was wearing her seatbelt and in the horrible wreckage, which was later taken to a Seaside tow lot, the airbag hung limply across the Emergency workers were already using the Jaws of Life to free Croke from the smashed car when Carmel Regional Fire and Ambulance paramedic Michelle Cumming arrived with EMT Ernesto Valdez moments later.

County's housing solution: Build in Carmel Valley

By MARY BROWNFIELD

NOW THAT Fort Ord has been yanked off the drawing board for new housing, county planners have come up with a stunning proposal to accommodate the county's growing population: Build 1,500 new homes in Carmel Valley.

The sudden shift came after Congressman Sam Farr put the kibosh on land transfers at Fort Ord to force Marina and Seaside to agree that more of the new houses built at the former Army base must be "affordable."

County planners responded to Farr's abrupt move by redrawing their housing plans in the General Plan Update to cut the 2,500 units at Fort Ord to zero and authorize 1,000 new homes to be built at the mouth of Carmel Valley and 500 more inland.

The board considered the plan at its meeting July 9. Supervisors could act on the housing element — and the rest of the 500-page General Plan Update — as soon as July 17.

Of the 8,500 homes to be built countywide over the next 20 years, the original draft of the plan called for 2,975 in the "Greater Monterey" area to serve the work force here — 2,560 homes in Ft. Ord, 200 adjacent to the City of Monterey, 115 near The Crossroads and 100 in Carmel Valley.

Eliminating the Ft. Ord project would force those homes to be put in other areas close to Peninsula job centers. "Option 2" includes 1,475 homes adjacent to the City of Monterey, 1,000 near The Crossroads Shopping Village and 550 in the valley.

But supervisors warned against counting on development in areas that can't sustain it to solve the county's housing shortage.

Cal-Am paying $1M more for electricity

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE HUGE increase in electricity prices that has been so devastating to many local businesses has taken its biggest bite out of the California-American Water Company, which will spend $1 million more for electricity this year than last year, according to a company spokesman. Some of those increased charges have already trickled down to customers' water bills, with more on the way.

Cal-Am was authorized by the California Public Utilities Commission last year to pass on a $625,000 increase to its customers to cover the company's suddenly higher electricity tab.

Cal-Am spokesman David Stephenson said his company had little choice but to raise its own rates after its PG&E bills increased by 43 percent — a development over which the water company "had zero control."

While Cal-Am paid $1.45 million in electricity bills in 2000 — mainly to keep the pumps running — the company anticipates paying at least $2.4 million this year. So far, the PUC has only authorized the water supplier to recoup 62 percent of the higher costs it has to pay.

Stephenson said his company has already submitted an application to the PUC to charge its customers another $400,000 to cover the rest of the electricity hike it's had to

Bach Fest musicians avert honeymoon disaster with help from Carmel police

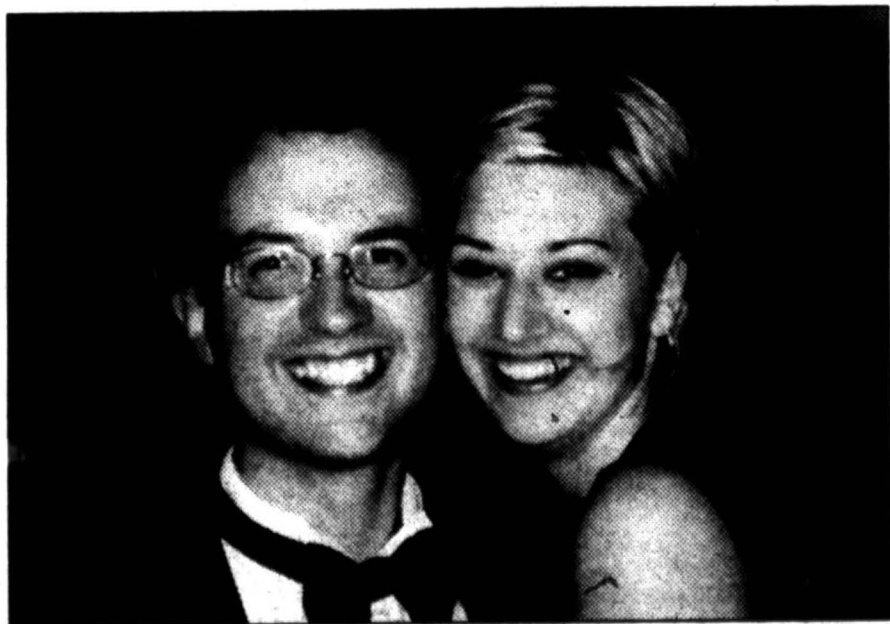

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

A ROMANTIC sunset-viewing at Carmel Beach this week by newlywed Bach Festival musicians was almost a disaster: Groom Andy Arthur's wedding ring flew off his finger and disappeared into the sand as his horrified bride, Kirsten Blase, watched. Not a good way to start a marriage.

Frantic digging and hunting were to no avail. Passersby stopped to help and one offered a cell phone to call the police. Five minutes later, Carmel Police Officer Robert "Buck" Melton arrived on the scene with a metal detector which located pennies and a silver ring, but not Andy's platinum ring. Buck bucked up everyone's spirits while the hunt continued, according to a grateful Kirsten.

A 10-year-old bystander suggested that the "ring" setting on the detector might not locate platinum, and curiously Newlyweds Andy Arthur (harpsichordist) and Kirsten Blase (soprano) are happy again, now that his wedding ring has been recovered from the sands of Carmel Beach.

Patriotic cell phone antenna Ok'd

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A PLAN to install a Sprint PCS cell phone antenna — cleverly concealed in a flagpole in front of the Carmel Police Department — won approval from the Carmel City Council last week. The cellular phone giant will now be able vastly improve its service in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The only question left unanswered at the July 2 meeting: Who gets the $43,000 Sprint PCS will pay for the privilege of a Carmel-by-the-Sea cell phone site this year?

The Carmel Youth Center — Sprint PCS's first choice for its antenna — originally brought the proposal to the city and hoped it would benefit from the revenue. (Ultimately the city and the cell phone company chose the police flagpole instead of the youth center's roof.)

Youth center director Kelly Lepai asked the council to "consider the youth center" when it decides who should get the little windfall.

Carmel City Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, who is also a board member of the youth center, agreed that it should reap the benefits. She said the center has been counting on the funds since the antenna proposal was made in Nov. 2000.

But other council members weren't prepared to turn over the money to the nonprofit just yet and asked city manager Rich Guillen to investigate. The city has been struggling with its own declining revenues.

Sprint PCS consultant Blaine Swafford said he hopes to have the antenna installed and running within four months. Thus far, Carmel-by-the-Sea has been one of the biggest "black holes" within the Sprint PCS system, and the company has been trying to get approval from the city for a year.

In the last few years, Carmel-by-the-Sea approved four other locations for cell phone antennas, including:

- the Pacific Bell building at Junipero and Seventh, which hosts cell phone antennas for both Pacific Bell and AT&T in fake chimneys on its roof;
- the Doud Building, which has an Alpine PCS antenna on its roof;
- the Jade Tree Inn on Junipero between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, home to Metro PCS's antenna; and

■ the Carmel Fire Station, for Nextell Communications' antenna.

The police station's new flagpole will look similar to the one already in place — complete with an American flag. However, the top four feet of the new flagpole will be "radio frequency transparent" material — the same substance used in stealth airplanes.

"The reason you can't see it on radar is that it allows radio waves to travel through it unimpeded," Swafford explained. Signals to and from the antenna will be routed to a base station in Carmel's corporation yard, which will communicate with the Sprint PCS main office in Santa Maria.

This year, the cell phone company will pay the city $43,000, including a one-time installation cost and $1,500 per month rent for the antenna and storage space.

For the rest of its five-year lease, Sprint PCS will pay $18,000 in rent per year.

Commission tweaks Carmel's wireless communications law

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CONCERNED THAT an increasing number of wireless communications antennas in Carmel might cause health hazards or interfere with high tech devices and radio transmitters — including police and fire communications — the Carmel Planning Commission voted July 10 to recommend the city council tighten rules governing cell phone antennas.

If passed, the revised ordinance would require a wireless provider to file a plan outlining how it intends to test its transmitters to verify they comply with licensing requirements and cause no ill effects. The carrier would not receive a building permit until the test plan is submitted.

A proposal to keep antennas at least 20 feet from any residential building was dropped after staff advised the planning commission that only the Federal Communications Commission has jurisdiction over such matters.

Carmel to refrigerate sizzling Fresnans, courtesy CBA bus

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Business Association plans to test a new shopping shuttle by bringing 43 Fresno tourists to town for a day. The CBA hopes the shopping trip, and more like it, could be the shot in arm the city needs during an economic downturn.

Tourists will board at Fresno Fashion Fair — a sister property of Carmel Plaza — at 8 a.m. July 30 and arrive in Carmel by 11 a.m. for a full day of shopping and dining. CBA director Brenda Roncarati says the trip should sell out easily, since temperatures of over 100° are frying Fresno while Carmel enjoys its typical summer highs in the 60s.

Costs for advertising and the bus will be recouped by the $50 fare. However, local businesses have contributed all sorts of niceties to enrich the experience for the tourists. And the business association teamed up with the owners of Carmel Plaza to make the shopping trip cost effective.

Csaba Ajan, owner of Portabella, will host a wine and hors d'oeuvres reception for the tourists at his Ocean Avenue restaurant. The CBA has a lot of shopping sacks on hand — they were ordered for cruise ship passengers who didn't end up disembarking back in May — and plans to distribute the bags filled with goodies such as free makeup samples, courtesy of Saks Fifth Avenue, and corkscrews from Ventana.

Chateau Julien donated wine and The Pine Inn contributed champagne for the trip back to Fresno, departing Carmel at 7 p.m.

Other businesses contributed prizes — including a future stay at the Coachman's Inn — for a raffle on the trip home.

The return trip will also be the perfect time for the CBA to conduct a little marketing research by passing out surveys and asking the tourists to share their shopping receipts in exchange for raffle tickets.

"We'll be able to see what got them here," Roncarati said. "Do they plan to come back? How far into town did they go? How much money did they spend?"

And if the shuttle experiment is a success, the CBA may use the strategy several times a year, perhaps expanding it to include overnight stays, to boost Carmel's economy during the off-season.

Late news on Bach tickets

BACH TICKET purchase procrastinators may be disappointed they won't be able to get into sold-out performances for the July 15 Brazilian Guitar Quartet at the Mission; the July 19 twilight Series concert at the Church in the Forest, Pebble Beach; the July 25 Elizabeth Wallfisch and the Festival Baroque Strings performance at Santa Catalina, Monterey; or the July 31 final Byrd, Handel, Bach Mission concert — but there are availabilities for other performances.

Be warned, however, that there are only limited tickets for the festival's opening weekend concerts at Santa Catalina on Saturday and Sunday, July 13 and 14.

The best way to purchase tickets or to check on availability of tickets for performances through the festival's end on August 4, is to drop by the Bach Festival box office, cottage on Lincoln and Ninth (off the All Saints Church courtyard), or to call the box office at 624-2046 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and Sundays 12 noon to 2:30 p.m.

Del Monte dog show at CMS

Burglar grabs $90K in less than one minute

By MARY BROWNFIELD

IT TOOK only 37 seconds for a thief to smash a window at the Saks Fifth Avenue in Carmel Plaza and run off with tens of thousands of dollars in jewelry early Monday morning, according to Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Terry Chandler.

"He broke the window with a rock and went to the display case directly in front of that window — about 10 feet — smashed out the glass, reached in and started grabbing jewelry and stuffing it into a sack or bag," Chandler said. "And then he was gone."

Under cover of darkness around 4 in the morning July 8, the burglar broke into the south side of Saks from inside Carmel Plaza, according to Lt. Pete Poitras.

"There is some lighting," he said. "It appears the suspect did not concern himself with alarm systems or anything. He used speed to pull off the crime."

The suspect — caught on tape by an in-store video camera — wore dark clothing, including something that covered his face. Chandler said he was unable to tell what the suspect used to break into the display case.

Officers said they responded to the scene two minutes after the store's alarm sounded but the thief had already fled. Officer Larry Bagley and his dog, Dax, searched Carmel Plaza for signs of the perpetrator without success.

The burglar took off with about 40 rings, necklaces and other pieces of jewelry; the store estimated the loss at about $90,000. Robert Massey in the Saks security department would not comment on the crime.

Poitras said the burglar may have hit other stores on the Peninsula.

"There is some suggestion based on the M.O. and the crime that it could be related to other burglaries in Pacific Grove, Carmel and Monterey," he said, "because of the rapidity, the rock and the smashed case."

Four-day weekend brings crowds, boosts business

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE FOURTH of July weekend packed Carmel-by-the-Sea with people and provided a welcome boost for many downtown businesses struggling with the recession.

"So far it was the best weekend for us in all of 2002," said Csaba Ajan, owner of Portabella restaurant. "The encouraging part is we had people from the East Coast in good numbers and a sprinkling of guests from abroad."

Saks Fifth Avenue's business nearly doubled from July 4 last year, according to manager Catherine Bartels, who credits much of those sales from people attending the city's July 4 celebration in Devendorf Park, just across the street from Carmel Plaza.

"It definitely helped," Bartels said. "People dispersed in town and probably went shopping. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday were all strong days."

The Cypress Inn also thrived over the holiday weekend, selling out July 5 and 6, though business dropped by 10 rooms on Sunday July 7, said manager Hollis Thompson.

"Our occupancy is down 2 percent from last year's numbers, but I'm not complaining," Thompson said, adding that from now until November the outlook for room sales is pretty good.

Larry Hoover said Inns by the Sea's five hotels in Carmel came close to filling up over the holiday weekend, though some of those reservations came at the last minute and were discounted.

"We were close to capacity and I'm very well pleased with how it turned out," Hoover said. However, Hoover was realistic about the state of the tourist industry. "People are still price conscious and very last minute."

While the holiday weekend boosted business for most inns and restaurants, it was a mixed bag for Carmel retailers. Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, owner of Two Sisters Design, said business was actually down at her Dolores Street shop.

"On holiday weekends people are preoccupied with dining and looking around and are not in shopping mode," Hazdovac said.

Hanson Gallery on Ocean Avenue saw a big increase in foot traffic over the holiday, though it's less clear whether the crowds translated into better sales. "We've had more people strongly considering things," said Patricia Kramer, assistant director of the gallery. "People are definitely opening the conversation more."

Carmel Drug Store's sales over the July 4 weekend were definitely up compared with last year, according to manager Ross Arnold. And the Fourth Avenue Pasta House, though several blocks away from Ocean Avenue, also reaped the benefits of the influx of people, according to manager Deepak Shrestha.

Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Company had lines out the door all day, said manager Penny Rueckl. "We were swamped. It was much busier than Memorial Day."

Some businesses are hoping that July 4 weekend will be the start of better things. Some Carmel inns are expecting even more guests this coming weekend July 12 to July 14 — drawn by the Laguna Seca Superbike Races and the Carmel Bach Festival.

"It is very encouraging to have your tables all filled up," Ajan said. "I had forgotten exactly how that feels."

Bike path delayed while county, residents debate final alignment

By MARY BROWNFIELD

MONTEREY COUNTY has finally scraped together $154,900 in grants of federal and local tax dollars to get started on a bike path through Carmel Valley, but homeowners in the area want to meet with planners before the project gets under way, according to public works director Lew Bauman.

The board of supervisors was set to vote on a $137,077 contract with an engineer to design and conduct environmental review of the bike path, but the public works department pulled the item before it was discussed.

The Carmel Valley Bike Path would meander through the valley from Quail Lodge to Highway 1 along parts of Valley Greens Drive and Rancho San Carlos Road and across property south of Carmel Valley Road, according to Bauman.

Although its exact route has yet to be determined, the idea has been part of the county's bike plan for several years.

When affected property owners learned the contract was about to be finalized, they asked the county for time to take a closer look at a bike path that might run alongside or traverse their land.

"At this juncture we have not done the work to see what the final alignment would be," Bauman said. "We want to discuss it with them and had intended to do that with the consultant nonetheless, but if they want to do it earlier, we have no problem with that."

Public works is in the process of scheduling those meetings.

The county has an extensive list of bike lane projects, according to Bauman, but since the outlays that pay for them are often small, it takes a while to accumulate the money to build them.

"At this point we have enough funds to do the preliminary design and environmental review," he said. The consultant will evaluate possible routes, riparian and wetland concerns, property acquisition, flood control issues, geotechnical considerations, cost, environmental impact and bicycle safety.

"We strongly endorse bicycle paths," Bauman said. "And we would like to find a design that's acceptable to the community as well."

ANNABELLE SAFE, ON THE MEND WITH GIMPY BULL

By KIRSTIE WILDE

MEAGAN SCHOLINK'S prayers were answered July 10 when her pet cow, Annabelle, was spotted among the million-dollar homes on Bay Ridge and brought back to Carmel Valley. Annabelle had disappeared from her Mid-Valley home June 29.

"She made it all the way to the high-rent district," said Meagan's father, Larry Scholink. "That's quite a ways, considering all the canyons, hills and fences in between."

A Bay Ridge resident called a security guard to have the 1,000-pound intruder ejected. The guard contacted Linda and Tony Ferrasci — well known ranchers in the valley who are active in 4-H Clubs — who lassoed Annabelle and took her home. Their own bull had fallen in a canyon and broken his hip, so they were up to their eyeballs in bovine rescues this week.

A cowboy at Holman's Guest Ranch named Jason Mercurio gets the credit for putting the story together, and reuniting 11-year-old Meagan with Annabelle. "Jason's mother had read him the story about the missing heifer in The Pine Cone and he also knew the Ferrascis had rounded up a homeless cow," Scholink said.

Annabelle and the bull are convalescing at the Ferrascis and she will be back home by the weekend.

Beginning in June 2001, California's PG&E customers began paying higher energy bills to cover the cost of long-term energy contracts purchased by the state during the electricity shortage.

Some Carmel customers — including Nielsen Bros. Market and the City of Carmel itself — have found themselves paying $2,000 more a month for their energy, though they say their energy usage itself has not increased. Now, they'll get hit with higher water bills, too.

Stephenson pointed out that Cal-Am, because of strict water conservation measures on the Monterey Peninsula, is pumping the same amount of water each year.

And the water supplier is not in a position to limit its pumping to off-peak hours to avoid the stiffest energy charges, Stephenson said.

"We have our pumps running constantly," he said.

In addition to its pumping costs, Cal-Am has to pay more money for other electrical uses — which it is not allowed to pass on to customers, according to Stephenson.

"We are only allowed to increase rates for the actual cost to produce water for the customers. We have some very significant charges at our filter plants that don't include pumping and those have to be absorbed," he said.

enough, when the setting was changed to "trash," the platinum ring was found. No one took offense at this.

"People were cheering," Kirsten told The Pine Cone. "It was a little drama."

Appropriately, the bride, a soprano, will be heard with the Festival Orchestra in a "Love Letters from the 18th Century" program of Purcell, Handel and Mozart at the Church in the Forest, Pebble Beach, at 5:30 p.m. Wednesdays, July 17, 24 and 31. Ring-loser Andy Arthur, an organist and harpsichordist, will perform in the Twilight Series "Love Letters" performance, also.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur, who became engaged at the old Del Monte Hotel in Monterey opening night of last year's Bach Festival, were wed in Andy's hometown of Cambridge, England two weeks ago. Following the three-week Bach Festival here, which commences Saturday, July 13, the newlyweds will make their home in London.

Sleep on a Tempur-Pedic

It's the viscoelastic Swedish bed that makes all others obsolete!

At long last the technology revolution has reached the bedroom—Tempur® material is a breakthrough in sleep technology that will forever change the way you sleep. The original formula was developed in the early 1970s at NASA's Ames Research Center in an effort to relieve astronauts of the incredible g-forces experienced during lift-off. The result was an open-celled, breathable material that was temperature-sensitive, viscoelastic, and able to distribute pressure or body weight over the entire surface area Tempur-Pedic mattresses are pressure and heat sensitive; each person's body weight and motion is perfectly absorbed and distributed evenly, eliminating "peaks" or pressure points that may cause pain and tossing and turning. Memory cells sense your body temperature and weight, then conform to your exact body dimensions.

World-class motorcycle races at Laguna Seca feature local riders

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHEN A hundred thousand race fans descend on Mazda Raceway at Laguna Seca this weekend for the Honda International Superbike Championship, the locals might be watching for the few Salinas residents taking to the track: three-time U.S. superbike champion Doug Chandler, brothers Jason and Jeremy Chisum, and Tyrone Toloy.

Chandler, 36, has been a force on the American road racing circuit since his full-time entrance on the scene in 1989 and is now the best known rider from Laguna Seca's home county. Called "Dr. Smooth" for his fluid riding style, Chandler will be racing against last year's U.S. champion, Suzuki rider Mat Mladin, and this year's points leader, Honda racer Nicky Hayden, in Saturday's Superbike race.

"It's always something to look forward to — to come home and race at Laguna," he said.

The track is also home to brothers Jason and Jeremy Chisum, set to ride Suzukis in 750 SuperStock race. Toloy is scheduled to race a Honda in Friday's 600 SuperSport race.

The Chisum brothers' father, Jim, was one of Chandler's first sponsors when he went pro, and the racer has known them since they were kids and spent winters riding with them.

"At this point in my career, I know my years are numbered as a rider, and I think I can be helpful in teaching these younger guys," Chandler said. "I see that in next couple of years."

Racing for HMC Ducati this season after years on a Kawasaki, Chandler has himself been doing a lot of learning. He missed the season opener at Daytona and has spent the past few months getting used to his new ride while being slowed by injuries suffered when he crashed while racing in Atlanta earlier this season.

But a third-place spot on the podium at Brainerd two weeks ago has him raring to go at home.

"The timing is pretty good coming into Laguna," he said. "We should have a bit of momentum."

Chandler was also selected as one of the AMA's six wild card riders who will compete in Sunday's World Superbike races against a field of the world's best during their only stop on U.S. soil.

"At a test here in April we did really well, and I feel we should be able to go as fast, if not faster, this week," he said.

Among the competition will be Castrol Honda rider Colin Edwards — a.k.a. the Texas Tornado — who currently occupies second in the world championship rankings and hopes Laguna Seca, the only track where he gets to race in front of his home crowd, will afford him the opportunity to unseat points leader Troy Bayliss.

"In the past I've always seemed to struggle a little bit here for some reason, but this year I'm riding better than I've ever ridden in my life," he said. "The bike's working really good and I'm just far enough behind in the points [49] where it comes down to win or crash."

That mindset's new for Edwards, who took the championship in 2000, but lost it last year to Ducati's Bayliss. This year marks Edwards' eighth visit to Laguna, which he said is one of his favorite tracks on the world circuit.

"I grew up with lots of elevation changes and that's one thing I really like about it. Some of the tracks we run are just flat, but Laguna has a good mix of everything," he said. "From the Corkscrew down to the end of Turn 10 — that's probably some of the best section of track that you get in the world."

And while he's fighting off competitors during his two races on Sunday, Edwards' family and friends will be cheering him on.

"I've got half of Texas coming to support me," he said. "Of course, there's more pressure, too."

The Honda International Superbike Classic — the year's biggest event at Mazda Raceway at Laguna Seca — began with practice and qualifying July 11 and runs through July 14. For information on tickets and a schedule of events, visit www.laguna-seca.com or call 648-5100.

HMC Ducati rider Doug Chandler — who makes his home in Salinas when he's not racing — hopes to win his AMA Superbike race and finish on the podium when he rides as a wild card in Sunday's World Superbike races.

Classes, winemakers dinners at Ventana Inn's Cielo Restaurant

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

THE KITCHEN for Cielo restaurant at Big Sur's Ventana Inn & Spa, extensively refitted and enlarged, will now allow Executive Chef Matthew Millea to create cooking classes and develop a series of winemaker dinners there for the fall season.

While the kitchen work was going on through the spring, Chef Millea also expanded the vegetable and herb gardens at the restaurant.

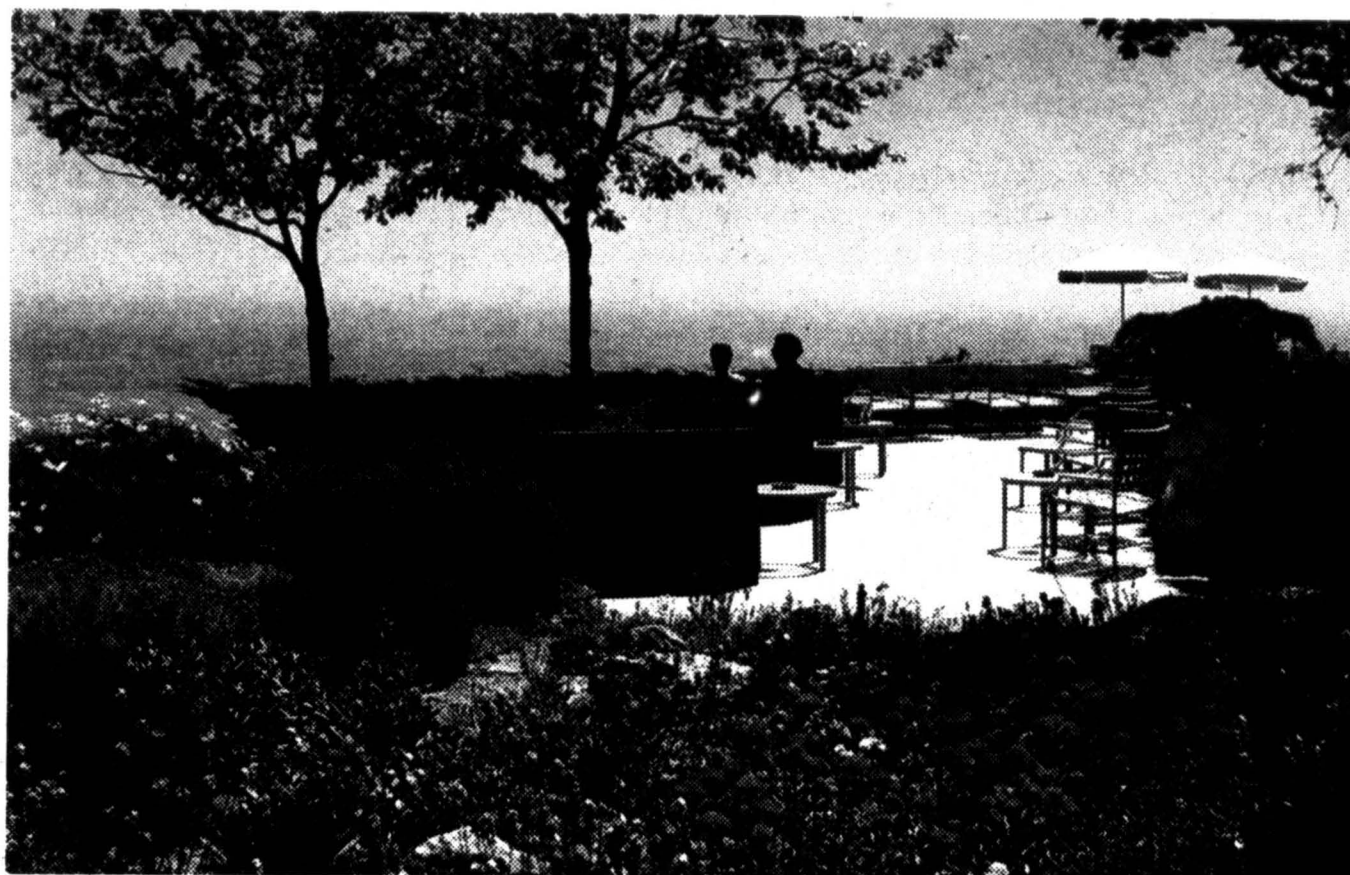

"Guests who take cooking classes will be able to pick their own fresh vegetables and herbs and assist with preparation while they learn," he said, emphasizing that the pleasure of growing one's own kitchen produce inspires creativity in the kitchen. Class schedules will be announced later.

Now centering his menu around Mediterranean flavors and textures, Chef Millea came to Cielo a year ago following a year as sous chef at Bernardus Lodge in Carmel Valley and two years as executive sous chef at the American Restaurant in Kansas City, Missouri. He is a graduate of Hyde Park's Culinary Institute of America.

Cielo, 1,200 feet above the Pacific on the rugged Big Sur coastline 28 miles south of Carmel, allows an uninterrupted panoramic ocean view from its terrace. It is open for lunch and dinner seven days a week, and reservations are required for dinner. For information, call 667-4242.

At right, late-afternoon diners enjoy the view from the terrace at Cielo Restaurant, Ventana Inn, Big Sur.

The inn, long a favorite of pleasure-seekers from the Carmel area and around the world, will offer cooking classes and winemaker dinners, according to Chef Matthew Millea, now that the restaurant's kitchen and gardens have been expanded.

Sardine Factory marries wines, dinner series

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

SOMMELIER Frederick Dame, worldwide president of the Court of Master Sommeliers, is returning to the Peninsula for a series of dinners paired to wines at The Sardine Factory.

On Wednesday evening, July 17, Chef/Owner Bert Cutino and Executive Chef Robert Mancuso will prepare a four-course menu designed to complement world-class wines selected by featured Master Sommelier Larry Stone of San Francisco's Rubicon Restaurant.

Passed hors d'oeuvres will commence the evening, and dinner will begin with appetizers, followed by a first course of rabbit served on sweet corn pudding. The entrée will be roasted Colorado lamb loin with peach and rhubarb chutney, whipped golden beets on zucchini; and dessert will be a summer peach crisp with honeycomb ice cream with eucalyptus-honey roasted apricots and cinnamon tuile. Wines will include Ca' Del Bosco, brut; Santa Margherita Lunda Dei Feldi; and Taurasi Aglianico Rosso. The dinner will be held in the Captain's Room and will commence at 7 p.m. Cost of the dinner is $125 per person, and reservations must be made by contacting Stephanie Thurman at 373-3775. More dinners in the series are planned for Sept. 25 and Nov. 20.

Heller's award-winning wines get new label

Art figures prominently at Heller Estate's tasting room in Carmel Valley Village and "The Dancers" — an exquisite 15-foot sculpture by internationally-known Toby Heller installed in the tasting room's gardens — has been incorporated into the new full-color Heller Estate wine label against a background of burgeoning Carmel Valley vineyards.

Gilbert and Tony Heller, principals in the winery known for its organic wines, were informed this week that the Heller Estate 1999 Merlot won a gold medal at the California State Fair in Sacramento — the premier wine competition in California — and also a Best of Class for wines within the Carmel Valley appellation.

The Heller Estate 1999 Chardonnay is the first of the winery's varietals to be bottled with the new label. Soon to follow: Heller Estate's 2001 Chenin Blanc and 2001 Pinot Noir.

Architect/graphic designer Michael Bolton created the label, as he did the Village tasting room at 69 West Carmel Valley Rd. For information call 659-6220.

Chef Kincaid opens 'White House' restaurant in gracious P.G. Victorian

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

CARE TO dine at the White House?

You won't need government clearance to do so, according to Chef Robert Kincaid, who has purchased the grand old dame of a yellow Victorian home at Lighthouse and 19th Street in Pacific Grove, painted it white and reopened it as his new restaurant.

Now known as Robert Kincaid's White House, the two story restaurant is open six nights a week from 5 to 10 p.m. and will be closed on Mondays. Chef Kincaid is planning luncheons in the near future.

Know for years as Gernot's Victorian before closing last year, the stately and elegant Victorian home looks down on Lighthouse from its steep rise. As well as for nightly dining, the large house's different rooms and outdoor areas will accommodate weddings and lend itself well to special occasions.

Kincaid has enjoyed a special presence in the restaurant scene on the Monterey Peninsula for a number of years: He opened Fresh Cream Restaurant at Heritage Harbor in Monterey and ran it successfully for years before selling it in 1989 and moving to the Pacific Northwest where he established yet another restaurant. Missing the Peninsula, he reestablished himself here eight years ago, creating Robert's Bistro Boulevard in the Crossroads Shopping Center, Carmel.

Recently, Kincaid was drawn to Pacific Grove which he said "is budding with new restaurants and shops." He is attracted by the energy there and was pleased to find the Victorian house a unique environment that has inspired a new menu.

He has devised a three-course menu with a prix fixe of $19.95, not including dessert or beverage, but will make his signature entrée dishes available on an à la carte basis.

For information or reservations, call 375-9626.

For a Wild Thyme, see Chef Terry Teplitzky

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

CHEF/OWNER Terry Teplitzky of Michael's Catering has moved from Watsonville to Marina, and at the same time has launched a new business, Wild Thyme Delicatessen.

Now at 445 Reservation Road, Teplitzky has long dreamed of operating a delicatessen in conjunction with his tri-county catering business, and after researching delis across the country, has brought in "an incredible selection of the best specialty foods and wines."

The deli also has an on-premise bakery and will feature freshly made sandwiches, salads, espresso and take-out dinners.

The new location afforded Teplitzky the opportunity to design a kitchen to meet the needs of his expanded catering operation.

Hours of the deli are 6:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 7 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Saturdays. For catering or deli information, call 884-2400.

FATAL

car, she said, adding that the crew on scene did an "impeccable job."

Cumming and Valdez tried advanced life support to save the girl, who they learned at the scene was named Michelle.

"I always make it a point to talk to the patient because they can still hear you even if they're unconscious," said Cumming, who has worked in the field for nine years. "Sometimes you don't want to get too personal because you don't want to break down, but other times it does help the patient to be able to talk to them. It was pretty traumatic."

They raced Croke to CHOMP, where a trauma team of 10 medical personnel had been assembled to treat her.

"I called CHOMP while the firefighters were extricating her and told them what we were bringing them," Cumming said. "You want them to be ready."

But doctors were unable to save Croke, who suffered massive internal injuries, a broken collar bone, fractured femur and fractured pelvis on both sides, according to Mackinga's report.

CHP Officer Kelly Lindholm, who is also investigating the wreck, said it did not appear the drivers were racing at the time. She also said loaning a car to an unlicensed driver is not against the law.

Learning from tragedy

Deer Path resident Sharon Saunders, mother of an 18-year-old daughter and a 19-year-old son, was sitting on her back porch playing bridge when she heard the screech of tires and bone-chilling crunch of metal.

"It seemed like it lasted five seconds, but you know it occurred in a fraction of a second," she said. She sent her daughter up the street to see what had happened.

"She got there the same time the emergency vehicles did, and it was pretty bad," said Saunders, who wanted her children to see the damage in hopes they would learn from it. "A mother's worst fear is to get that call."

Although her daughter was traumatized after seeing the wreckage, she gathered her brother and other friends at the house and walked back to the scene of the accident just as the ambulance left.

"Maybe it was horrifying enough that it will slow all these kids down," Saunders said.

According to Lindholm, Croke had applied to the DMV for her license but had not yet acquired it. She said young drivers account for a disproportionate number of fatal accidents.

"Studies have found that drivers aged 16 to 24 are responsible for 1/3 of the death total that we experience, so they're definitely a targeted group," she said. "We attribute it to lack of experience and maturity."

According to statistics gathered for the year 2000 by the Statewide Integrated Traffic Records System, drivers between the ages of 15 and 19 had more fatal and injury accidents per 10,000 licensed drivers than any other age group.

A memorial service for Michelle Croke — remembered by RLS faculty as a warm, vivacious, outgoing and intelligent student who loved life — has been set for Saturday, July 13, at 3 p.m. at the Church in the Forest on the RLS campus on Forest Lake Road in Pebble Beach.

"Please put in the paper that she always said to keep looking up, because it's more beautiful than looking down," a close friend said through his tears.

Smiley draws a fine portrait of Charles Dickens and the writing life

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

PULITZER PRIZE winning author Jane Smiley has taken up literary criticism with her latest book, "Charles Dickens," a Penguin Lives edition. If you are curious to own lives.

Only a powerful writer can do this. Smiley enables us to understand the contradictions in Dickens' own life that spill over into the characters in his books.

learn how a modern novelist views and analyzes a 19th Century novelist, this is a book you must read.

Only another writer of fiction can truly understand and identify the insight and observation necessary in creating believable characters whose idiosyncrasies and spirit kindle the reader's willingness to pursue the book's plot from beginning to end; and afterwards, to retain that knowledge of fictional characters as if they were truly known to us in our

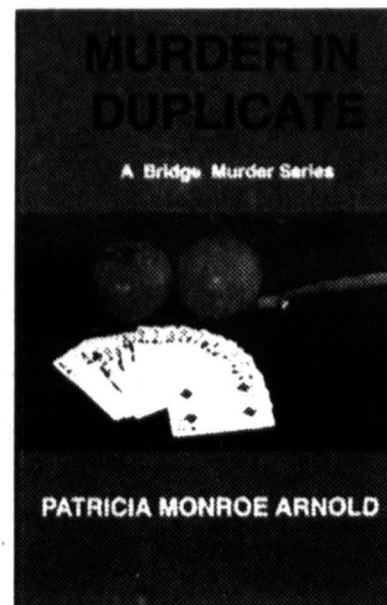

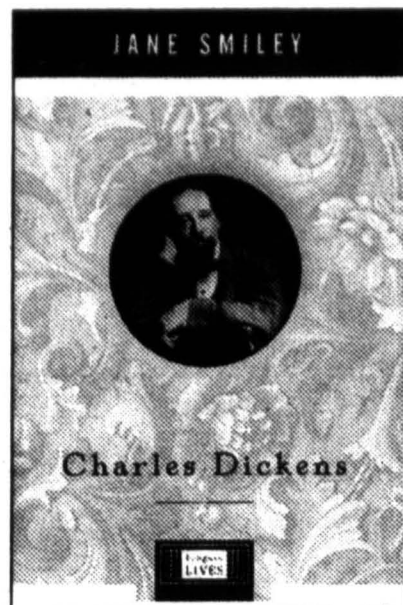

Smiley, who has written ten well-received and highly acclaimed novels and who taught at Iowa State University for fifteen years before moving to Carmel Valley to write full time, interprets Dickens' major works in this 212-page book. Her writing is accessible and fascinating, and one comes away with a much broader knowledge of the author Dickens who could write with great comedic wit and with profound understanding of searing tragedy

Dickens' novels portray a society so different from our own that reading any one of them paints a vivid history of the Victorian Era, and yet the humanity of each of his characters can be observed around us even today in our daily lives.

Smiley, who has been on a book tour of major cities in the United States, writes with understanding about Dickens' experience in America in the 1840s on his first book tour here.

The small hardcover book, nicely designed and jacketed, is a Lipper™/Viking Book released in May. It retails for $19.95.

Jane Smiley will be the guest speaker at 6 p.m., Thursday,

July 18 at the next Books & Dinner meeting at The Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard Shopping Village in Carmel. Together, the talk and dinner cost $17.50, and reservations are a must. Call 624-1803

THEME MYSTERIES generally are more fun than those without — especially cozies — and when an author cleverly integrates the theme within the plot, many a reader is hooked.

Take, for example, two murder mysteries by Capitola author Denise Osborne, whose lead character is a fung shui expert. Not only does the Asian-American protagonist's occupation give her entrée to many homes where crimes lurk within, but the reader learns a great deal about the ancient art of altering spaces to welcome harmony and good fortune into one's life. Watch for our review of Osborne's books during the coming month.

In like manner, Patricia Monroe Arnold of Santa Cruz has incorporated a bridge theme (as in card game) into her first mystery novel, "Murder in Duplicate." It is the first in a bridge murder series.

The story takes place in Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel-by-the-Sea and centers around a Monterey bridge club and its senior-age members. Bridge hands are even illustrated.

One of the club's members is murdered, and then another, and protagonist Kitty Malone puts her inquisitive nature to good use and follows clues to the murderer.

Mixed into the plot are cryonics, money scams and poison. This mystery definitely falls into the "cozy" category, and it's fun reading a novel set in our area, with street names and shops appearing without camouflage. Unfortunately, one of the "heavies" in the mystery has the same name — by accident, not by intent — as a famous writer who lived here for many years.

The 163-page trade paperback is published by Ariel Publishing Company, San Francisco, and sells for $14.95.

Author Arnold will sign books from 2:30 to 4 p.m. on Saturday, July 13 at the Thunderbird Bookshop, Carmel. For information, call 624-1803.

POET PATRICE Vecchione will present a workshop, "Writing and the Spiritual Life: Finding Your Voice by Looking Within" (from her book of the same name) from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, July 13 at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel-by-the-Sea. The workshop, appropriate for both beginning and experienced writers, is $50 for the day. For information, call 624-7491.

Free summer concerts Sundays at Forest Theater

Free Sunday one-hour concerts continue on stage at the Outdoor Forest Theater, courtesy of The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The summer programs commence at 2 p.m. on stage at Carmel's famous theater in the woods at Mountain View at Santa Rita. Bring a friend and a picnic.

On July 14, The Alan Berman Quartet, featuring keyboardist and vocalist Alan Berman (right), with bass, drums and a horn, will present a sophisticated program of swing and jazz standards.

On July 21, Layne Littlepage and Barney Hulse (left) will be heard in "Sing Happy," a program of upbeat, funny songs by Noel Coward, Cole Porter, Flanders and Swann and more.

Hollywood party and patriotic picnic highlight busy, busy week

"STIMULATING," SAID Barbara Babcock, of TV's "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman" fame, about her experience working in Pacific Repertory Theatre's production of "The Elephant Man." She was taking a breather at the cast party on closing night, held at The General Store, before a flight to Los Angeles the next morning to continue the exhausting process of moving here. But all this is part of "closing the circle, a sentimental journey." For Babcock is the daughter of the late Jadwiga Babcock, one of the earliest Carmel actors who not only performed at the original Golden Bough Theatre which later burned down, but also at the second one (which also caught fire). Thus, she's returning home. At this party she was with her goddaughter, Alison Hinds, who's based in Florida but who played as a toddler on Carmel Beach . . .

Carmel's Community Activities & Recreation Division head, Christie Miller, kept the show going flawlessly at the city's first annual Fourth of July BBQ.

Longtime soap star, James Kiberd, of "All My Children" fame, felt equally satisfied with his Pac Rep first stint. "It was transforming," he said, which fit right in with his current desire to explore new roles in both theater and television. But he's a man of many talents — not only a national ambassador for UNICEF who stays on top of world affairs, but also an award-winning abstract painter, currently exhibiting also at both the Winfield and the Phillips galleries in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

It was his friendship with PacRep's Geoffrey Shlaes that brought him to Carmel, where he continues to be fascinated by the fog that rolls into Carmel Valley, where he's staying for the next six months. Why play in "The Elephant Man"? "A culture is as good as the stories it tells about itself, its values, ethics, morals," he explained. "It's a survival issue." His wife, Susan Keith, is also an actor (most recently of ABC's "Loving"), producer and director. They're both looking forward to the upcoming July 20 PacRep gala at Quail Meadows, where they'll meet more of the community . . . In the meantime, dramaturg Dan Gotch attended a conference in Vancouver in his ongoing quest to find good plays . . . Deborah Smith, brought into PacRep for some minor

July 4th bash a huge hit

The City of Carmel hit a home run with the first Annual Fourth of July BBQ at Devendorf Park. Hundreds of people stood in line for free food (they consumed 640 hot dogs before the supply ran out), then hung out to listen to the band, Sound Bytes, and enjoy the carefree day. Yes for Carmel! was the hot dog provider, the Carmel Kiwanis gave chips and soft drinks, the Central Coast Celtics (with kilted Xavier Maruyama) had the coffee & cookies, the Carmel Youth Center handled the popcorn, and Carmel Host Lions including Clyde Klaumann handed out free ice cream. Clyde, by the way, is just about to be a granddad for the first time . . . Roger & Barbara Bolgard, just back from a whirlwind European tour of Prague, Vienna and more, helped out with the Carmel Heritage Society's stand serving watermelon, helped along by Erl Lagerholm, Cathy Collum and board prez Jim Gallagher . . . Sundial Lodge's Jeanette Moeller and Robbin Hale relaxed with Robbin's 20-month-old Adam, and four-year-old Danny. "This was very generous of the City," said Jeanette. "It's a good feeling and I'd definitely like to see this again" . . . Don & Margy Pelton prefer not to travel on such holidays. "And this is so nice, with the All-American hot dog!" said Margy . . . The Carmel Business Association board gang — Catherine Bartels & Barbara Gianotti, and Holly Stock of the Forest Theater Guild — were having a hard time persuading people the new directories they were handing out were free. "They keep asking the price of the directories," said Catherine, who, by the way, is very happy to be back from a NY business trip dealing with that city's nearly 100 percent humidity . . . Betty Neill had good friend Debby Cooke with her. Debby, a teacher, just moved back here from San Jose . . . Joe & Beverly Bellizzi spend every summer here, runaways from Palm Desert's heat. "This is really good entertainment and I hope they keep doing it," said Joe . . . Hats off to the City of Carmel!

Hollywood actress Barbara Babcock relaxed at the cast party for Pac Rep's "The Elephant Man," after starring in its successful run.

Jeffers Prize for Poetry draws more than 2,000 entries from around the world

Thank You!

THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA would like to extend a "Thank You!" to the following for making our first Fourth of July Celebration an overwhelming success!

Carmel Heritage, Carmel Host Lions, Carmel Kiwanis, Carmel Youth Center, Central Coast Celtic Association, Yes for Carmel!, Carmel Business Association, Adam Fox and Villeroy & Boch. The Monterey High School Navy ROTC Color Guard, Stephen Moorer, Richard Myer-Magic Master of Monterey County, Carmel Community Activities & Recreation, the Carmel Fire Department & the Carmel Police Department.

A special thank you to the "Celebrate America" committee:

Clyde Klaumann (chair), Greg Cellitti, Bruce Meyer, Steve Rana, Pat Sippel and to the many volunteers who unselfishly gave of their time!

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

MORE THAN 2,100 poems were entered in the annual Robinson Jeffers Tor House Prize for Poetry. They came from 48 states, the District of Columbia and 10 foreign countries. A retired attorney from Sacramento won the grand prize that carries with it an honorarium of $1,000.

Margaret J. Hoehn won with "Vincent, Drifting Toward Crows," concerning Vincent Van Gogh's nocturnal forays with paints and palette.

The third stanza reads:

"In that wide space before dawn, the man will gather his easel and paints, and lose his way in the empty streets of Arles. He will drift north, toward the crumbling season of crows; toward Dr. Gachet and the mercurial moods of the fields; toward Auvers and the dangerous passions of wheat."

Her poetry has appeared in many publications and journals and she has won three prizes for her chapbooks.

Hoehn lives with her husband and two children in Sacramento where she practiced law for many years.

Honorable mentions, each with an honorarium of $200, were awarded to Kim Rosen of Inverness; Bill Christophersen of New York City; Rhina Espaillat of Newburyport, Mass.; and Susan Kinsolving, formerly of Carmel and now of Bridgewater, Conn.

The Prize for Poetry has, since its inception, been underwritten through annual donations by Foundation board member John Varady. Final judges for the prize, some of the country's most prominent poets, have included Mary Oliver, Donald Hall, Dana Gioia, Sherod Santos and Jane Hirshfield.

This year's final judge was John Haines, author of 14 books of poetry and five books of essays. He was the keynote speaker for the 2001 Tor House fall festival.

Preliminary selections were made by Elliot Ruchowitz-Roberts, John Hicks and Patrice Vecchione.

Bank robbery suspect arrested in Paso Robles

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MAN who dropped his Arizona drivers license in Comerica Bank on Dolores Street June 21 after allegedly robbing it was arrested by Paso Robles Police officers July 2 for prowling, trespassing and being under the influence of narcotics, according to Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Terry Chandler.

Chandler and Lt. Pete Poitras drove to San Luis Obispo County Jail July 10 to question the suspect — 43-year-old Michael Bryan Leonard — about the Comerica Bank robbery.

Leonard was arrested after residents of a Paso Robles home saw him pass by their back door. He was and later discovered hiding in their basement, according to Chandler.

"He was saying people were after him — that someone gave him $10,000 for narcotics and that he'd gambled it away," he said.

Carmel police learned of his arrest after the FBI hit on it during a routine computer records search early this week. They received a warrant for Leonard's arrest on one count of bank robbery from Monterey County Superior Court on Tuesday and drove south to interview him in jail the following morning. Bail was set at $50,000.

Chandler said Leonard broke into tears and admitted the crime, though he said he didn't remember much about it.

"He wanted to apologize to the ladies in the bank," Chandler said. "He had to drink a lot of vodka to get up the nerve to go in." The money he stole is gone.

Although bank robbery is a federal offense and could be investigated by the FBI and prosecuted by the U.S. Attorney's office, Poitras said Leonard's case will likely be investigated by CPD and prosecuted under state law.

If he's found guilty, a first count of bank robbery could net Leonard up to six years in state prison, according to the California Penal Code.

At the time he was arrested, Leonard already had a new drivers license to replace the one he left at Comerica, Chandler said. "You can get a duplicate Arizona drivers license over the Internet for $4."

O P I N I O N

Editorial*Farr's bold move

THE WAY some people reacted, you'd think Congressman Sam Farr had come out in favor of strip malls and fast-food joints when he announced a halt to land transfers at Fort Ord.

The outcry over Farr's decision to put a stop to the transfers — basically, giveaways of free land to the cities of Marina and Seaside — showed how hypocritical some Peninsula political leaders are about affordable housing.

But Farr is one of the few whose assessment of the local housing market is accurate. His decision to put more pressure on local officials to take care of the working class is right on.

First of all, according to the congressman, it's a myth that inexpensive housing — a three-bedroom home for about $200,000 — cannot be built anywhere near the Monterey Peninsula.

"Construction costs for a house that you'd be proud to live in could be kept to about $160,000," Farr says.

And with free land courtesy of the U.S. government, that leaves another $40,000 for infrastructure and miscellaneous costs and you'd still have a house that a teacher, a nurse or a police officer could buy.

Furthermore, Farr argues, Fort Ord is the best place in coastal Monterey County for housing that working people can afford because so much of its land has already been developed by the Army.

But Fort Ord reuse officials paint a different picture. They say affordable housing at the former army base won't be economically viable without cash subsidies, which they want to generate with large numbers of market rate — i.e. expensive — homes.

They think the upscale communities of the Monterey Peninsula should bear more of the burden of providing affordable homes. Marina and Seaside want their fair share of mansions.

But that argument defies history. Not long ago Monterey, Pacific Grove and even Carmel were affordable. It's not these cities' fault that so many people want to live there and that home prices have been driven to the stratosphere.

Inexpensive homes can be built without government subsidies if land costs per unit can be kept below $25,000. That can be done by building up — apartments and condos — or by building where the land is already cheap. Fort Ord is the right place.

Otherwise, commutes will get longer and longer and our roads will get even more crowded as working people seek housing in Soledad and Greenfield. That is not the best future for the Monterey Peninsula.

BATES*Letters to the Editor*Where the city is going*Dear Editor:

I must support the positions that Monte Miller, Larry Rodocker and Constance Wright have taken recently.

Personally, I don't believe the codes in question are "bad" ones but I agree that, if the residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea no longer think these or any other laws are appropriate for our city, the voters should make that clear. The City Council can then make appropriate changes. From where I stand, however, there appears to be little interest among residents for a change that will allow the appearance of Carmel to be significantly altered.

This however is not the most important issue raised. Having been an ever closer observer over the past few years, I can say it is very disheartening to see the increasing number of times over the last two to three years that a majority of the City Council has overridden its own staff, commissions and committees when their decisions have been based upon the codes on which staff and all of Carmel's official bodies — elected and appointed — are supposed to base their decisions. To see where this trend is likely to lead in just a short while, we need only look to what has happened in the unincorporated parts of the county, where the Supervisors have routinely overridden their own rules, regulations and master plan. In the county the best way to get away with doing something illegal on your land is to go ahead and do it knowing that if you're found out, the penalty will be small to nonexistent. Is that where Carmel is going, too?

Why indeed should qualified people serve on our commissions and committees when they know the hard decisions they make stand a good chance of being arbitrarily overturned? Mayor McCloud is said to have complained that it's hard to find good people to appoint to various bodies. If she has indeed complained about this, maybe she needn't look too far for the reason.

Norman Rockwell*Dear Editor:

It was a glorious Fourth of July! The City heard all of you who responded so favorably to the "Keeping in Touch" column in The Pine Cone. This article solicited interest in celebrating Independence Day with a family-oriented, small-town event which all ages could enjoy; the city staged such an event last week. We invite your feedback as to whether you would like to see this become an annual event and how we could improve on this initial effort.

Please join me in thanking the Fourth of July Committee chaired by Clyde Klaumann,

Meals on wheels needs help feeding hungry seniors

By TAMARA GRIPPI

MEALS ON Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula, the nonprofit that delivers three squares a day to 225 elderly homebound residents, desperately needs more volunteers to keep the food on the road.

Meals needs regular drivers willing to commit to one of its 26 routes once a week as well as substitute drivers to pinch hit, said Viveca Lohr, executive director of meals on wheels.

"We have so many volunteers who are now aging themselves — people who have been with us for 30 years," Lohr said. "We're really looking for that new breed of volunteers."

In addition to providing nutritious meals to elderly residents who can no longer shop and cook for themselves, meals on wheels provides a vital link to the outside world.

"The volunteer driver may be the only person they see all day," Lohr said. "We've had a couple of instances where people were in really bad situations — one person was lying on the floor with a broken hip and the driver called 911."

Carmel resident Chuck Poland, who has been delivering food for Meals on Wheels five days a week for the last 17 years, said there's nothing that can quite match the feeling he gets from helping people.

"I'm 82 and I still act like I'm 14," Poland said, who drives all 26 routes for Meals on Wheels. "This is not what you'd call work."

Poland said he especially enjoys brightening the day for the people he serves. "Most people know me because I wear funny clothes — pinks, greens and aquas. They think I'm crazy, but when I walk in with great colors, it wakes the older people up."

Volunteers make one delivery of breakfast foods, including cereal, juice, fruit and milk; a sandwich, salad and desert for lunch, and a hot dinner to homebound residents throughout the Peninsula Monday through Friday. If they request it, food for the weekend is delivered on Friday, too.

Meals on Wheels also serves hot lunches daily at the Sally Griffin Senior Center, 700 Jewel Street in Pacific Grove.

While the nonprofit suggests a $5-a-day donation for their three meals, nobody is denied service if they can't pay.

Drivers are needed for Meals on Wheels routes in every community — including Carmel, Carmel Valley, Monterey, Seaside, Marina, Sand City and Pacific Grove.

The time commitment for volunteers is just a few hours a week. Drivers generally pick up the meals at the Sally Griffin Center between 10 and 10:30 a.m. and are usually finished with their deliveries by 12:30 p.m.

Lohr encouraged stay-at-home parents to volunteer and bring their children along — a delight for the elderly clients. The only requirements for volunteers are a valid California driver's license and automobile insurance.

Meals on Wheels has a host of other volunteer opportunities at the Sally Griffin Center — including prep work in the kitchen or help with all the activities sponsored there. "Volunteering makes you feel like you're 10 feet tall," Poland said. "And someday you might need help."

To volunteer for the program or to find out more information call Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

STORY & PHOTO/MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

PUPPY LOVE Rammer, 10, is fond of foggy weather, according to Mom Melodie, who brings her to Carmel Beach with great regularity.

Thursday morning was ideal Puppy Love weather. Standing on the bluffs on Scenic, we surveyed the beach scene: Blond and white dogs could barely be discerned through the summer fog, and even black-coated Puppy, at water's edge, looked sort of gray.

She came into focus when we reached her, and although Mom assured us that Puppy likes attending on-going obedience classes, it took us quite a while to get her to simmer down for her photo. Evidently it's the social aspects of the class that Puppy loves.

Ten years ago in LA, six-week old Puppy was a foundling — discovered by Mom's friend Vilma — tied to a tree with a note requesting a good home. Puppy found two homes: one with Vilma, and one with Melodie, who then lived in Hollywood. A year later, Mom Melodie and Puppy moved to Carmel after Puppy was introduced to the beach by Omega Meadows-Galbraith, a Lab/retriever mix. The beach has since become the center of Puppy's universe.

Mom bought Puppy a throw-toy Kong in which she hides treats. But instead of retrieving the Kong when thrown, Puppy merely removes the goody. And when she feels peckish, she'll bring the Kong to Mom and drop it on her toe. So much for throw and fetch: Puppy only plays for food.

Generally happy-go-lucky, but a barking nag when Mom stops to chat, Puppy ran off down the beach at the end of our interminable (to her) interview. When we turned to wave good-bye, Puppy had disappeared into the fog.

Local Expert to Speak on Long Term Care ...

9:00am
Saturday, July 20th

You've probably seen the recent newspaper articles that say "Californian's reveal an alarming tendency to misperceive the need and cost of long term care." You may have said "I don't need that, if I require care, my family will take care of me." Or you may have thought "I'm never going into a nursing home, so why should I get long term care protection." Many people just like yourself have had the same thoughts, and through a greater understanding of the reality of long term care, we've helped them plan for their goals, and safeguard their future...

Long Term Care Insurance isn't just "insurance in case I need to go into a nursing home"; it's about protecting your dignity and respect. It's about preserving your choices of where you want your care, and what kind of quality that care will be. It's about protecting your assets, and keeping the burden of caregiving away from your loved ones. It's about making choices today that enable you to hold on to your freedom tomorrow...

FIND OUT IF LONG TERM CARE PROTECTION IS RIGHT FOR YOU!

Reserve your seats now for this important discussion:

"Why Californians Are Unprepared For Long Term Care, And Why It Doesn't Have To Be That Way."

topics include:

- ❖ What is the California Partnership for Long Term Care?
- ❖ The dangers of planning for long term care using annuities.
- ❖ What is "Stay Out Of Nursing Home" Insurance?
- ❖ How to NOT become a burden on your family.
- ❖ 6 ways to reduce the cost of Long Term Care Insurance.
- ❖ 3 ways to avoid losing your life savings to long term care.
- ❖ Why your long term care expert should represent multiple companies and products.
- ❖ Maintaining your independence and choices.
- ❖ The Federal Long Term Care Program vs. the others.

This seminar will be presented at the Carmel Mission Inn (corner of Rio Rd. & Hwy 1) at 9:00am in the DOLORES suite. Seating is limited. A Continental Breakfast will be served. Call today:

P.B. Community Services District plans expansion, but needs land

By MARY BROWNFIELD

NOW THAT the Pebble Beach Community Services District buildings are bursting at the seams with firefighters, maintenance equipment and office personnel, plans are under way to add almost 5,000 square feet to the facility at Lopez and Forest Lake Road. The PBCSD also wants to build a 3,600-square-foot storage building and an 11,000-square-foot parking lot.

The project, which is making its way through the county permit process, would also require 61 trees to be removed and 2.2 acres to be acquired from the Pebble Beach Company, according to PBCSD General Manager Richard Andrews, who said the new building would help the district meet its immediate and long-term goals for public safety and sewer maintenance.

"We will move our maintenance equipment from one of the bays in the existing building to the new building, and that will free up more space for fire engines and trucks," he said.

The expansion also provides offices for the Del Monte Forest Property Owners Association and the Del Monte Forest Foundation, a new training room, and more space for administration, engineering, finance and information technology departments. A new second-story office would accommodate the fire prevention officer.

PBCSD applied for its county permits in February, received a unanimous recommendation of approval from the land use advisory committee March 14, and asked for public comment on the environmental study — even though it does not yet own the land that would house much of the expansion.

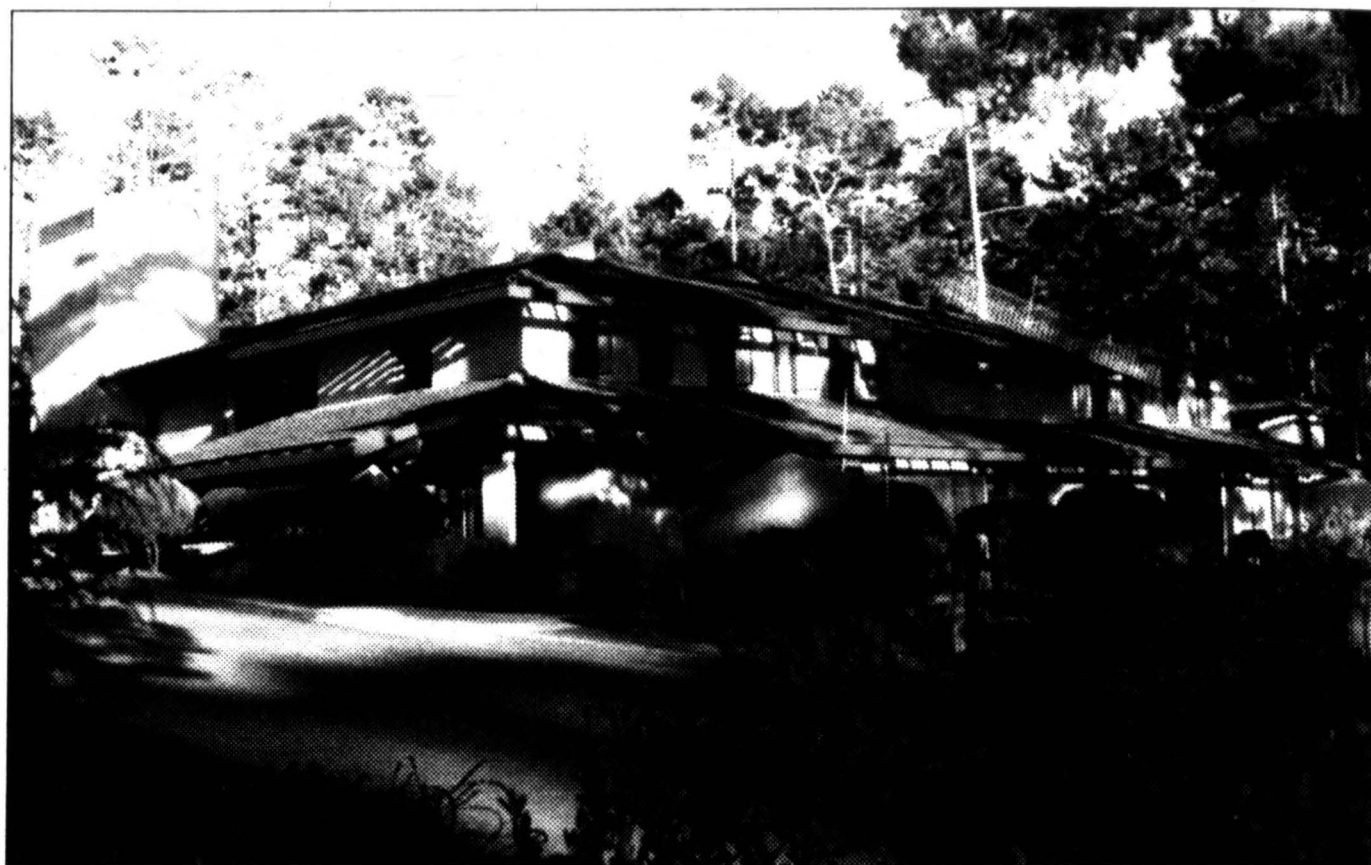

The adjacent 2.2-acre property is currently zoned for residential use, according to district engineer Mike Niccum, but that zoning would change to forest/open space if the company's Measure A receives California Coastal Commission approval.

"The county planning department has indicated to us that our proposed uses for that property would be allowed under the proposed zoning," he said.

But the Pebble Beach Co. has so far balked at selling the land voluntarily, according to Andrews. The board is scheduled to vote at its July 26 meeting on whether it should try to acquire the land through eminent domain.

In the meantime, the district is continuing to seek county approval. After the PBCSD board adopts the environmental study — probably in August — the application will be forwarded to the county planning commission, according to Niccum.

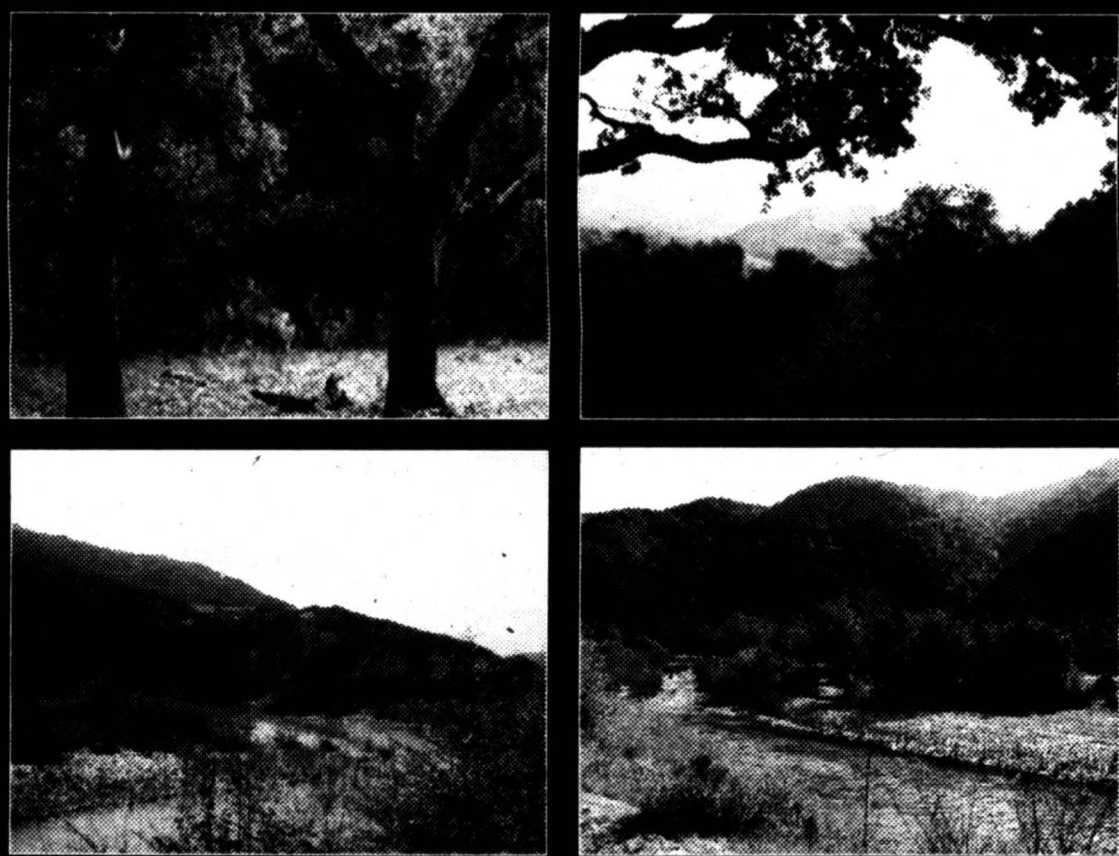

"We want to keep that process moving because it's fairly time-consuming to work through planning," Andrews said.

The Pebble Beach Community Services District building in Del Monte Forest will be expanded by 5,000 square feet if the county approves a plan submitted by the PBCSD board.

Flier will help with basics of zoning code

By TAMARA GRIPPI

IN THE hopes of avoiding any more misunderstandings about Carmel's strict rules on signs, lighting and outdoor displays downtown, the city is passing out a little preventive medicine.

The planning department — which has recently contended with businesses putting up such illicit adornments as benches, columns, a rope fence and even an aluminum sign — decided to pass out a list of Carmel's do's and don'ts in the commercial district.

The official fliers outlining the city's requirements for flags, signs, painting, landscaping, lighting, and outdoor displays — including planters, sculpture, furniture and merchandise — will be passed out with business license renewal forms every year and included with every application for a new business.

By supplying the information in an easy-to-understand format, the city hopes to make life easier for the businesses while reducing the number of infractions, said planning director Christi Di Iorio.

"Anything the city can do to help improve communication with businesses is great because the business district is our bread and butter," said city councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, a business owner who suggested the idea of informational fliers. She noted that while Carmel's strict laws do a good job of keeping the city looking nice, sometimes they catch people unaware.

Taking the extra step to get the information out to the business community may also improve public relations. It can be frustrating for a store or restaurant owner to spend a lot of money on a fancy new sign only to find out it isn't allowed.

"The flier will point out that you need to come in and talk to City Hall about things — such as painting — that you might be able to do on your own anywhere else," Hazdovac said. The councilwoman pointed out that the city has recently made another improvement to streamline the process for a new business license. Now applicants are able to meet with a team of city staff — from the planning, fire, police and administration — at one sitting to schedule all inspections.

HOUSING

is a blueprint for disaster," supervisor Judy Pennycook commented.

Chairman Dave Potter blamed Farr for the problem.

"This is highlighting Farr's result: Putting new development in areas that aren't already developed," he said. "Fort Ord was a redevelopment project."

Road plans

Supervisors also heard a brief presentation on the proposed traffic plan, which calls for major improvements to numerous roads in the county, including bypassing some of Highway 68's most congested areas by building an expressway through Fort Ord.

"But even if we have a way to fund all this, we don't get ourselves completely out of the traffic problems," Colangelo said. "Housing closer to jobs will be a key component."

The planning commission suggested changes to the traffic plan, including widening Highway 1 between Castroville and the Santa Cruz County line, leaving Blanco Road two lanes but widening Davis Road to four south of the Blanco intersection, eliminating an Espinosa Road expressway and installing Caltrain commuter stops in Pajaro and Castroville.

Rushed schedule?

Colangelo asked the board to mull over several questions before next week's meetings, including:

- Where should housing be located within each region?
- How much housing will be built within cities?

Congressman Sam Farr wants abandoned houses at Fort Ord (above) and much of the new construction on the former army base to be dedicated to affordable housing. The county responded by proposing more housing construction in Carmel Valley.

Stop signs coming at entry to village

By MARY BROWNFIELD

DRIVERS HEADING down Carpenter Street to Serra Avenue will soon encounter another stop sign on their way to downtown Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors voted July 9 to adopt an ordinance calling for the installation of a five-way stop at the busy Northern gateway to the city marked by Joe Mora's wooden Junipero Serra statue.

The intersection had allowed drivers turning left from Serra Avenue onto Camino Del Monte to do so without stopping, and drivers leaving town by the same route to do the same.

But after residents in the area complained about speeding drivers and near misses, the county studied traffic there and suggested a stop sign at every corner would make the intersection safer for pedestrians, residents trying to get out of their driveways, and the 7,700 motorists who cruise through it each day, according to Nick Nichols, deputy public works director of engineering for the county.

Studies showed most drivers on Serra were approaching the intersection at about 35 mph — 10 mph above the posted limit. Also, the county concluded the through-traffic layout did not seem logical and could confuse drivers unfamiliar with the area.

Despite the route's importance during rush hour, a computer model suggested the new stop signs won't cause backups during commute hours when the intersection is at its busiest, according to Nichols.

Monterey County Public Works recently restriped Serra to make the lanes narrower and encourage drivers to slow down. The stop signs will be installed within a week after the ordinance takes effect Aug. 8, Nichols said.

Drivers on their way into Carmel from Carpenter Street will soon have a new stop sign to contend with — and Father Junipero Serra will be watching to make sure they obey it.

J. S. Bach has a reputation for having been a dour, serious person who worked hard all the time and didn't laugh much.

While we will never know how much laughter there was in the Bach households for the simple reason that laughter leaves no record of itself, we do know that certain well-documented events of his childhood would have made any one of us into a humorless person, if not outright depressed.

Think of it: in 1695, young Johann Sebastian lost his mother, then his father remarried within a few months, only to die soon after. Bach was, at the age of 10, left in the

MOZART, HÄNDEL, SCHÖNBERG JOIN BACH AT 65TH FEST

By DAVID MILLER

ONE OF THE hottest tickets at this year's fest is the Tuesday night offering at Santa Catalina School: Händel's Messiah in the Mozart orchestration.

The only time I have heard this version of Händel's masterpiece was in a concert at the Brussels Opera in 1985, conducted by that great Mozartian, the late Sir John Pritchard.

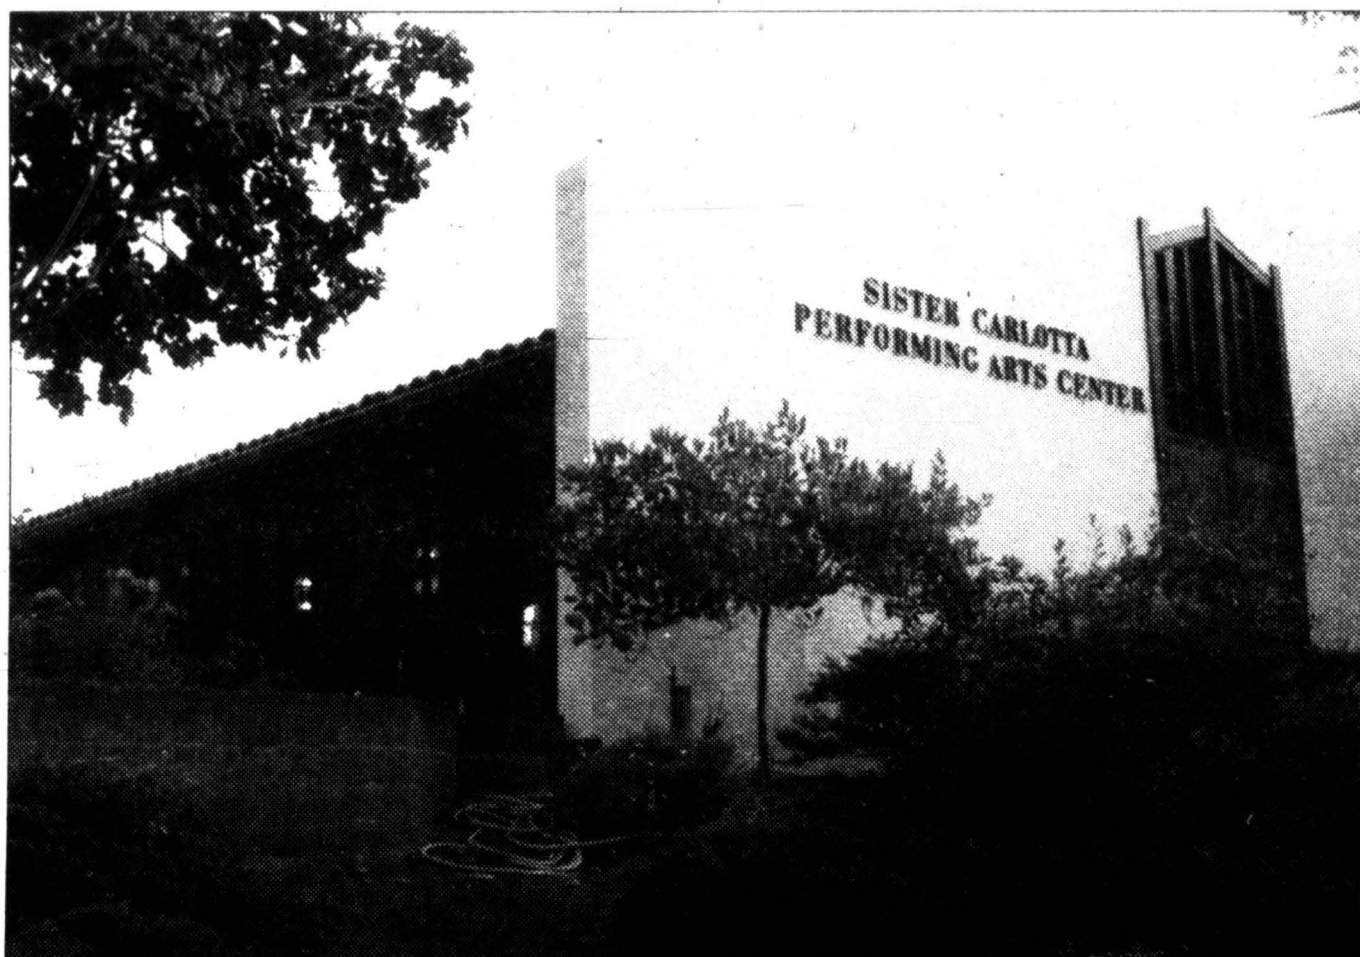

At the time, I thought how refreshingly politically incorrect it was to program a reorchestration of an 18th century masterpiece in an age obsessed with original performance practices.

Happily, the Carmel Bach Festival does not share this obsession, nor did Mozart. In Mozart's day, playing the Messiah in the original orchestration would have been as unthinkable as, say, hiring Tommy Dorsey to play at Woodstock. Styles had changed and Händel's orchestra, with its heavy use of the oboe and complete lack of clarinets, was simply out of fashion in 1789 Vienna.

The Mozart/Händel Messiah — conducted by Bruno Weil and featuring the

A completely different atmosphere will be enjoyed by audiences at the Carmel Mission, which was founded in 1771. Candlelight concerts there are a perennial favorite.

Homescapes, Carmel

Brothers go out on their own to go back to their roots

When brothers Thompson Lange and Beau Finklang opened their first store in 1996, they wanted to create a retail shop that felt like a home, using plants, flowers, art and accessories to accent the furniture they were collecting from around the world. Their original store, The Grove Homescapes in Pacific Grove brought that concept into reality.

Homescapes, Carmel opened in 1999 with an emphasis on gifts and furniture, but the low natural light of its 30' interior limited their inventory of plants and flowers at the time. Despite Homescapes, Carmel winning Gifts & Decorative Accessories magazine's Merchandising Achievement Award in August of 2001, "we always felt the need for the orchids and plants to complete our concept," says Finklang. Last November, they were able to revive that concept when they expanded Homescapes, Carmel into the light-filled adjacent building on Dolores. "We were really fortunate to get the annex," says Lange, "it allowed us to give new life to our store."

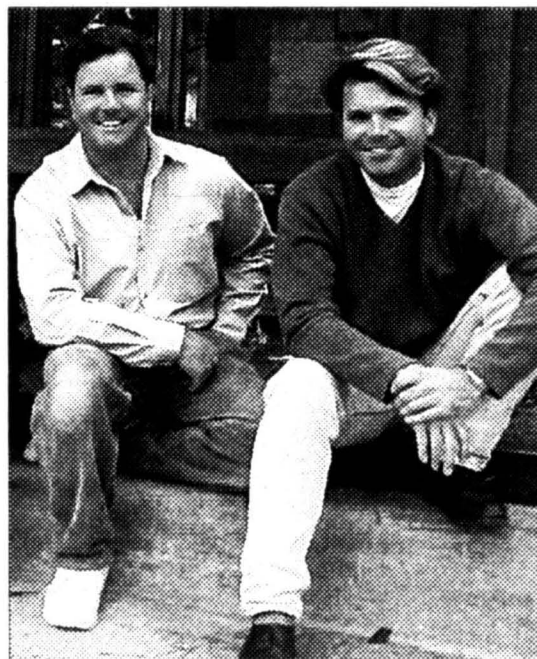

The brothers sold their ownership in The Grove Homescapes in 2001 to concentrate on the potential of their Carmel location. "Even though the property is being developed in the near future, all the indicators showed that this was the right move for us," according to Lange. So far this year, the surge in business has allowed the brothers to bring in multiple containers from China, Indonesia and Europe. "Beau and I will be going to England and France in August to fill a container, and we're toying with India in January," says Lange.

First up, though, is the arrival of the upholstered and American Leather furniture that will be in the store in July. "Sofas and couches are new to us," says Finklang. "But the timing seems right. Besides, what fun is it to play it safe?"

And with the expansion of the garden product planned for this summer, Homescapes, Carmel will have come full circle to the concept that started it all. "It's a really exciting time for us," according to the brothers. "Coming home to Carmel was the best thing we ever did."

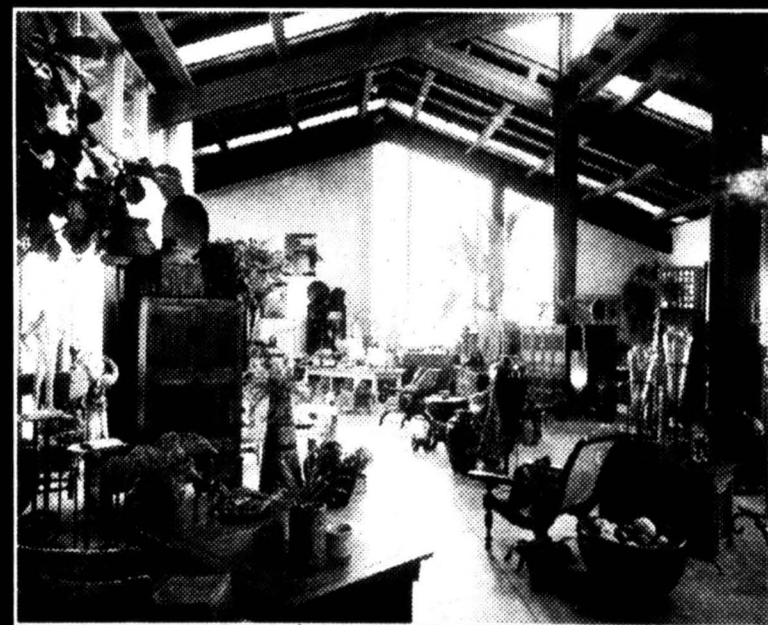

In November of 2001 Homescapes, Carmel expanded into the adjacent building, and reintroduced orchids to their product mix.

Beau Finklang and Thompson Lange opened Homescapes, Carmel in October of 1999.

The store mixes contemporary and antique furniture with plants, orchids and the work of local artists.

WHO

care of a stepmother whom he had only just met.

Even for the 17th century — when serious illness routinely carried people off while their families watched helplessly, waiting for antibiotics to be invented and invoking the Will of God — this was serious stuff.

Perhaps inevitably, the situation with the stepmother didn't work out and the 10-year-old was soon bundled off to live with his brother, Johann Christoph, then 24 and just married.

Johann Christoph, like virtually the whole family, was in the music business, making a living playing, singing and composing in the service of a church, duke, or town. This big brother became

He was, at 15, a hard-working, professional, under-paid musician, and would remain so for the rest of his life, moving from one North German town to another, following the work.

Bach's harpsichord and composition teacher and, surely in an effort to keep his pupil from outgrowing his instruction too quickly, did not allow the youngster to study a certain manuscript, containing pieces by several then-famous composers. Johann Sebastian tried to get around this rule by copying the forbidden pieces by moonlight over several months, surely doing his eyes no good. Of course his disobedience was punished and the copy destroyed, which must have been heart-breaking, yet another assault on a normal childhood.

Childhood ended

By the time J. S. Bach was 15 his childhood was over. He moved to Lüneburg in the north of Germany to sing in the Matins Choir, first as a boy soprano, then as a tenor. It must have been clear to him even then that his whole life would be music, whatever form it might take: singing, fiddling, playing keyboards, teaching, arranging, composing . . . He was, at 15, a hard-working, professional, under-paid musician, and would remain so for the rest of his life, moving from one North German town to another, following the work.

Bach made his music in the service of orthodox Lutheranism, which was rather high-church with elaborate music, as opposed to the then-fashionable Pietism, in which music played a much smaller role. Pietism, a bit like present-day Charismatic Christianity, with its emphasis on a personal relationship to God, may not have gone as far as altar calls and speaking in tongues, but it was of that general tendency. Lutheran

Orthodoxy — a direct descendant of Martin Luther's break with the Catholic Church in 1521 — was Bach's faith, and it went for solemnity and glory in the service of God, and, above all, more music. Did he adhere to the faith because that's where the work was? On the contrary, Bach evidently was completely sincere, and, lucky man, never seems to have had doubts.

It is well documented that Bach didn't suffer fools gladly. He hated having to teach Latin and music to unruly teenagers, and he regularly refused to do it, to the repeated distress of his employers. He also couldn't bear inferior musicians, and in a story on which all biographers agree, once took off his wig and threw it at an incompetent harpsichordist! He sometimes showed an indifference to the rules, as when he asked for, and got, a month off from Arnstadt to go to Lübeck and hear the Danish composer and organist Buxtehude, and showed up back at work four months later, not even having written to let his boss know! We know how important Bach's music is, but in his day, he was unfavorably compared to Telemann and Kuhnau, and many others who are now completely forgotten.

Despite all of this, Bach was not a revolutionary. He accepted his calling and his station. He set himself the task of making his faith audible, and succeeded to an extent that is still not completely known. His music speaks strongly to our secular age, meaning even more than it meant to the devout Lutherans of 1750 Leipzig. Who knows what comfort and inspiration people will draw from him in the future. ♦ festival orchestra and chorus and soloists Sanford Sylvan, Alan Bennett, Kendra Colton and Sally-Anne Russell — was chosen, along with several other pieces for this year's Bach Fest, to emphasize the contribution to music history of the Baron Gottfried van Swieten.

Van Swieten, who commissioned the orchestration, was an enlightened music lover with a house in Vienna (a city never visited by Bach) and was Mozart's close friend. Mozart read Bach's music for the first time at van Swieten's house, and the impact was immediate and profound.

When I heard that the 2002 festival would evoke van Swieten, I knew there would have to be a performance of Mozart's last symphony, the "Jupiter," where one can clearly hear the effect of one great master on another.

In the last movement of the "Jupiter" — which will be played on Fridays along with works by Carl Phillip Emanuel Bach and Haydn — sonic landscapes explored by Bach in his fugues are revisited by a Mozart with a new expressive agenda and new, symphonic techniques. The effect is overwhelming.

The effect of the Baron's musical cross pollination is hard to imagine nowadays, when information about what other composers are up to flows freely. If van Swieten had not shown Bach's music to Mozart, it is entirely possible that nobody would have, and music history would have been the poorer.

Lush and romantic

Another Viennese connection this year is with Arnold Schönberg, whose piece for string orchestra, "Transfigured Night," will be played at the Saturday concerts, preceded and followed by Bach. Concert-goers who know Schönberg's other pieces will be surprised by the sound of this music: lush and romantic, such as Brahms would have written if he had lived to be 90. "Transfigured Night" was composed before Schoenberg's invention of the notorious twelve-tone system, and sounds the better for it.

Sundays will see performances of the B Minor Mass, always a treat, and Mondays will be given over to a different group each week in an innovation called the Guest Artist Concerts. The most surprising choice is that of the Brazilian Guitar Quartet, who will play on Monday the 15th. I have never heard them, but their program looks enticing and funky. Monday the 22nd will feature the Combattimento Ensemble from Amsterdam and on Monday the 29th the baroque quartet Red Priest will present their program intriguingly called "Nightmare in Venice."

As is usual, Wednesday night is Festival Chorus Master Bruce Lamott's turn to shine at the Mission Concert, and Thursday is Concert Mistress Elizabeth Wallfisch's virtuoso turn. Expect great things.

Another innovation this year is the concept of the "Guest of the Fest" concert, some at noon, and some at 9 p.m. These mostly solo performances involve well-known violinists Elizabeth Blumenstock, Aimée Kreston, and Elizabeth Wallfisch; and cellists Angela East, Ron Leonard, Doug McNames, and Jian Wang. The Leader of the Brazilian Guitar Quartet, Paul Galbraith, will also give a solo recital.

Rare public concerts

These concerts will largely feature the Bach literature for solo violin and solo cello. In fact, it will be possible to hear all six of the pieces (three sonatas and three partitas) he wrote for solo violin. These pieces are not often performed in public, so some concertgoers may find it hard to imagine one little fiddle creating rich harmonies and even fugues! All I can say is, don't imagine — go hear! Carmelites who have followed Ms. Wallfisch's solo recitals for the last several years have heard for themselves what an amazing range of colors and dynamics can be drawn from an unaccompanied violin.

Other composers, inspired by Bach, have written for solo cello or solo violin, including Bartok, Kodaly, and two who be played at Carmel this year: Max Reger and the great Belgian, Eugène Ysaÿe. Ysaÿe was the leading violin virtuoso of his time, a teacher and mentor of Yehudi Menuhin, and the founder of the Liège school of violin playing, which to this day shines with his light. His compositions, which are very rarely heard, are considered fiendishly difficult to play, and challenging for the audience as well. His solo Sonata Number 2, "The Obsession," will be played at 9 p.m. on July 20th at All Saints Church by Lyndon Johnston Taylor, principal violinist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic. ♦

The current condition of Sunset Center, with its exposed beams and giant excavation where the stage used to be, may aback long-time festival goers. But therein lies the promise of a return to the auditorium by 2004, without the antiquated facilities and terrible acoustics.

PROJECT ON SCHEDULE FOR COMPLETION NEXT YEAR

BY TAMARA GRIPPI

THE BACH Fest is in its second year of making do without its long-time venue, Sunset Center. And while the former school auditorium has been closed to all performances for a year, its renovation has produced quite a show of its own.

Since the groundbreaking ceremony last October, Carmel residents have witnessed an ongoing transformation as the theater was stripped, the shingles came off the roof, the stage house was demolished and the arched entryway was separated from the lobby and rolled into the parking lot on rails.

Just last month, steel columns and beams of the new stage house have been put in place.

Roebbelen Contracting's project manager Ken Wenham called the Sunset renovation "an extremely challenging project," but added, "we feel we're staying ahead."

Completion is scheduled for May 2003.

While weather hasn't caused any significant delays, the Roebbelen crews have had to deal with other unforeseen developments including the discovery of bones under a concrete stairwell in May.

The bones, which showed evidence of having been sawn, had been there at least 60 years, police officers estimated. Was this evidence of some unspeakable crime?

Work was halted and Carmel Police guarded the bones while an archeologist sped over from Salinas to identify them. Foul play was ruled out when the archeologist declared the bones to be portions of a cow tibia, likely the work of an old-time local butcher.

With the bovine skeleton mystery solved, the Roebbelen crews resumed making steady progress, completing the steel frame for the stage house and preparing to start work on the new 'proscenium' — the arch at the front of the stage.

Milestones of a transformation

While Sunset Center was the subject of only one police investigation this year, there has been plenty of doings at the former Carmel school auditorium to catch the attention of casual passersby.

When Roebbelen crews reported to the job site in October, their first big task was to tackle the asbestos abatement, which involved removing all the sheet rock and plaster and some of the plumbing insulation throughout the complex.

"The asbestos had to be contained in each area we were working in, so we encapsulated each area in plastic and used negative air machines that kept the air flowing in," Wenham said.

After two-and-a-half months of workers walking around in protective suits equipped with respirators, Roebbelen was ready to get down to the serious business of demolition.

They began by removing all the interior walls and flooring. "We pretty much just gutted the whole building," Wenham said.

Then crews moved on to take off the roof from the auditorium and remove the old, cramped stage house, piece by piece. The object of so much derision over the years by musicians was gone.

"We demolished it all the way through the foundation — from the roof to the ground," Wenham said.

By the middle of March, the crews produced a remarkable feat — separating the entrance facade from the lobby area and rolling it into the parking lot on rails, inch by inch.

Wenham explained that the familiar arched entryway is to be integrated into a new lobby. But a new foundation and elevator pit and basement are to be added under it. So it had to be preserved intact. Once the new foundation is in place the entryway will be reinstalled.

The renovation project has most recently attracted a lot of attention again when the steel beams of the large, new stage house suddenly appeared.

Wenham explained that while the steel outline of the stage looks like a big box right now, the finished product will be much more in keeping with the roofline of the auditorium with its peaks and gables.

The new stage will be 10 feet deeper than Sunset's original stage, with warm-up rooms, a conductor's room and dressing rooms. The wider proscenium will also be an integral component of the new auditorium's acoustics.

Throughout the rest of the summer, crews will be framing of the stage house and building the stage itself.

Will Sunset Center be ready for next year's Bach Festival? Stay tuned as the transformation of Carmel's historic theater continues. ♦

Roebbelen Contracting's project manager Ken Wenham pointed to the scene of the crime — the excavated site of an old Sunset Center stairway where a mysterious set of bones was discovered in May. Construction halted until authorities were able to get to the bottom of the mystery. Although police found evidence that the bones had been sawn, foul play was ruled out when an archeologist declared the remains belonged to a cow.

More donors needed to pay for $21 million Sunset Center renovation

BY TAMARA GRIPPI

AS THE renovation of Sunset Center moves full steam ahead the City of Carmel and the non-profit group, Sunset Center for the Arts, are doing all they can to finishing the fundraising for the $21 million renovation project.

When construction bids came in more than $3 million higher than expected, both the Arts group and the city decided to redouble their efforts to provide funding for the renovation project. But Sunset Center for the Arts, which has already raised $11.65 million towards Sunset Center re-do, is only halfway to its goal of raising an additional $1 million.

Nancy Doolittle, president of the Arts group, said over a thousand donors have already contributed to the project, but more people are needed to step forward. Doolittle promised that the non-profit group would continue to raise money until project is finished.

The City of Carmel, which issued a $9.9 million bond to pay for its portion of the $21 million renovation project, is applying for grants and other funding to help pay back the $3.45 million 'special call provision' of the bond in the next three years.

"I know I speak for a very grateful community in thanking those who have contributed so generously to date to enable construction to begin," said Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud. "We welcome new and additional gifts to fund almost $3 million which remains to be raised."

Those interested in contributing to the renovation project should contact the Campaign for sunset, P.O. Box 400, Carmel-by-the-Sea, CA 93921 or call 625-2486.

The matter of tickets . . .

A NEW ticket-buying venue is now open to patrons of the Carmel Bach Festival.

The box office occupies a cottage at the lower end of All Saints Church, Ninth Avenue facing Lincoln Street, Carmel-by-the-Sea. Tickets to all performances can be purchased there from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily, and noon to 2:30 p.m. on Sundays.

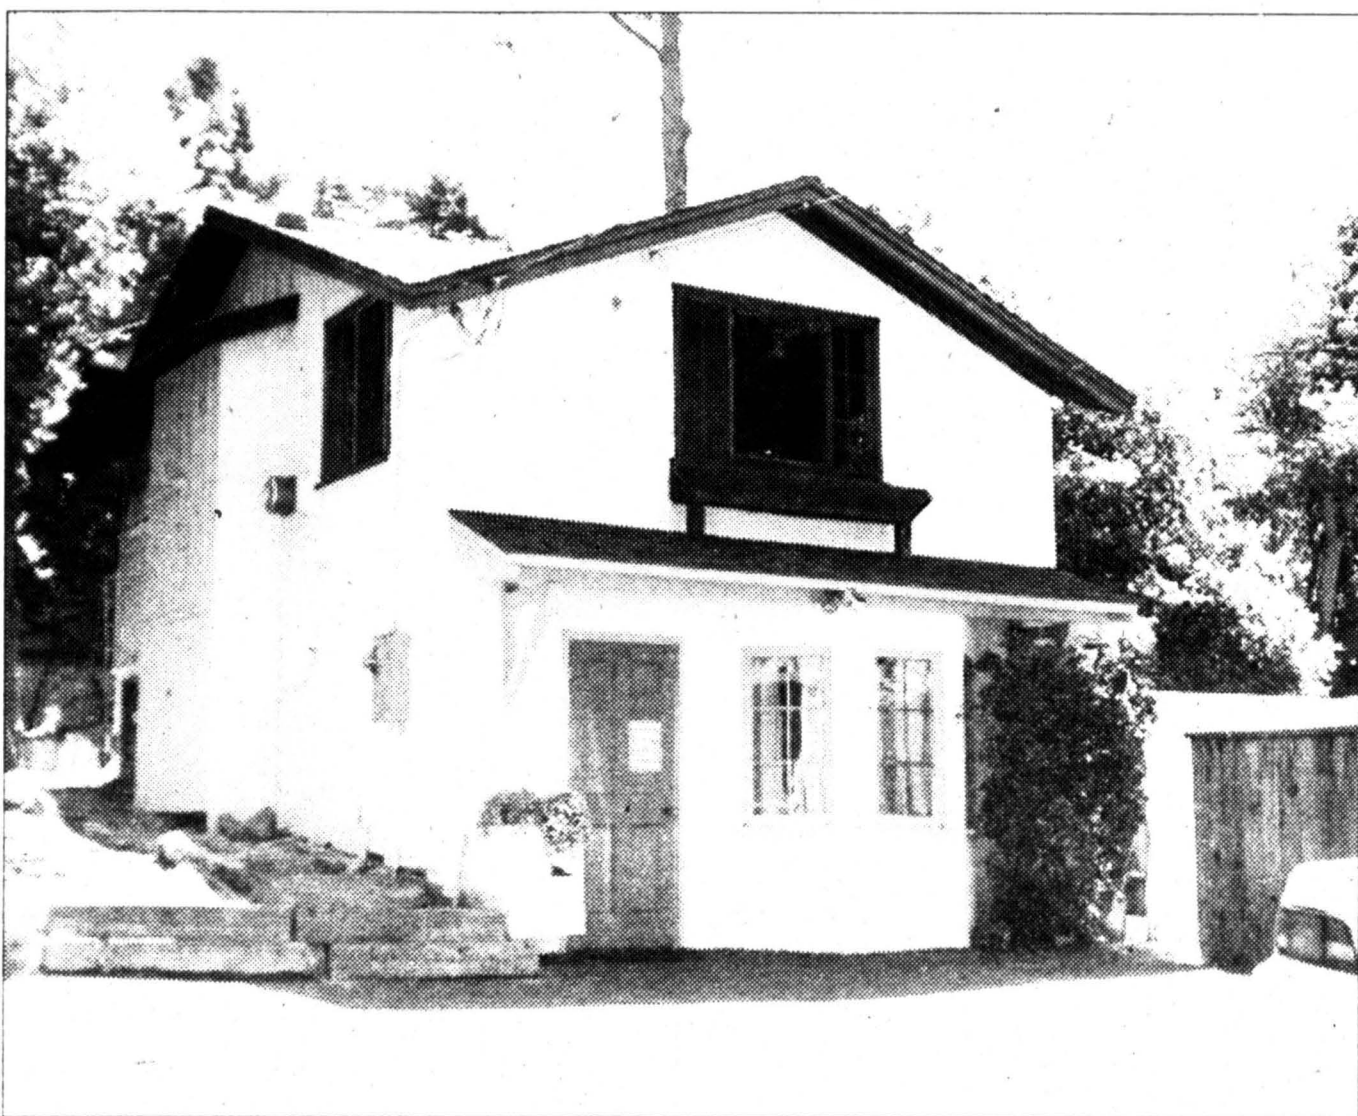

Tickets are also available by telephoning (831) 624-2406.

Another way to order Carmel Bach Festival tickets is via the festival website: www.bachfestival.org.

This ticket sales method has an advantage in that it is always open and select special offerings are posted there.

It is also possible to buy tickets at the various concert sites as early as one hour before performances begin. Patrons should expect to buy tickets for that event only.

Advice from the experts: Order tickets early. Sold-out performances at press time include the July 24 Twilight Concert and the July 15 evening program featuring the Brazilian Guitar Quartet. ♦

The Carmel Bach Festival box office is this year housed in the cottage at the lower end of All Saints Church, near Ninth Avenue facing Lincoln, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

TanningTruth.com

The only source for scientifically supported material on the balance between the benefits and risks associated with ultraviolet light exposure and tanning.

Why Indoor Tanning Is "Smart Tanning"

Indoor tanning, for individuals who can tan is an intelligent way to minimize the risk of contracting sunburn while maximizing the enjoyment and benefit of having a tan. Again, we call this SMART TANNING because tanners are taught by trained tanning facility personnel how their skin type reacts to sunlight and how to avoid sunburn outdoors, as well as in a salon.

Tanning in a professional facility today minimizes risk because commercial tanning salons in the United States and in most Canadian provinces are regulated by the government. In the United States, exposure times for every tanning session are established by a schedule present on every piece of equipment that takes into account the tanner's skin type and the intensity of the equipment to deliver a dosage of sunlight designed to minimize the risk of sunburn. The schedule, regulated by the Food and Drug Administration, also takes into account how long an individual has been tanning, increasing exposure times gradually to minimize the possibility of burning.

That kind of control is impossible outdoors, where variables including seasonality, time of day, weather conditions, reflective surfaces and altitude all make outdoor tanning a random act and sunburn prevention more difficult.

Bob Kolbrener celebrates nature by capturing its ephemeral beauty

BY MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

PHOTOGRAPHER BOB Kolbrener's scenes of surf crashing against rocks are like musical crescendos frozen in time and, appropriately, are reproduced in this year's 65th annual Bach Festival brochure.

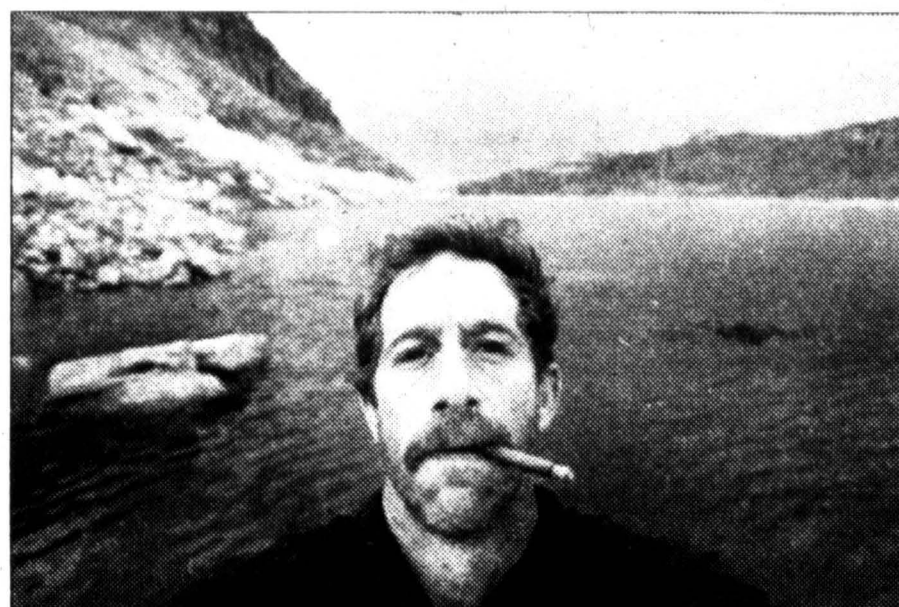

Also lending dramatic dimension to the brochure are his black and white photographs of the coast south of Carmel, trees in Yosemite, big sky in Arizona, and the canyon country of Utah.

Bob and Sharon Kolbrener, who live in Carmel Highlands, have previously allowed the Big Sur Land Trust and the Point Sur Lighthouse Keepers use of Bob's remarkable artwork. This year, they wanted to do even more for the community and made the photographs available at no charge to the Bach Fest. Some of these same photographs currently are on display in Saks Fifth Avenue windows in Carmel Plaza.

The subject matter, lighting and minute detail of Kolbrener's large format, black and white fine art photographs are such that his work is readily identifiable by anyone who has seen a collection of them, such as those exhibited in a solo show at Highlands Inn two years ago entitled "To Eradicate Ennui."

He captures the ephemeral beauty of lightning storms, rays of light through trees, waves pummeling rocks. A 1999 lightning storm here on the Central Coast yielded a series he numbered consecutively under the title "9/9/99." A set of images of majestic rocks at water's edge he has called, "Rock covers paper." Some of the gelatin silver prints, which he creates in his home darkroom, are as large as 40" x 50".

A Kolbrener portrait of Bruno Weil was done several years ago and has been used in Bach Festival promotion pieces, just as it is again reproduced in the inside front cover of the 2002 festival brochure.

One of only a few master photographers shooting today with an 8" x 10" Sinar as his primary camera, Kolbrener has chosen to stay committed to film photography in this new age of digitals. "I've put all my energy into this direction," he said. "I'm not going to go sideways now." His secondary camera is a 2-1/4 Hasselblad that prints up to 24" x 30".

Although the Kolbreners moved here only six years ago from St. Louis — where they ran their own commercial photography studio — Bob Kolbrener had been coming to the area for years, during which he took workshops from Ansel Adams and Brett Weston.

LENSMAN

His first workshop with Adams in Yosemite was in 1969, and with Weston the following year in Carmel. In the summer of 1974, Adams asked Kolbrener to teach photography to park visitors by day and park employees by night. Then in '77, Adams invited Kolbrener to instruct with him in Yosemite.

But while they were still running their commercial photography studio in St. Louis, they took five weeks off every so often, packed their gear into a van, and headed west with their dog to find dramatic subjects for his lens. Kolbrener's fine art work has been shot exclusively in the West. And it is here in the West that the Kolbreners have come to stay.

While he is best known for naturescapes, he's been working for 30 years on a portfolio he calls "Road Signs of the American West" and he also does nude studies of Sharon against breathtaking landscapes.

Represented in galleries in Santa Monica, Atlanta, and New York City, his work is displayed in the Ansel Adams Gallery in Yosemite and can be seen by appointment in the Kolbrener's Carmel Highlands studio.

For information about the photographs, call (831) 620-0235. ♦
